Four agreements signed

Nixon, Brezhnev toast gain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Linking arms in a symbol of common purpose, President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev Tuesday toasted four new Soviet-American accords before settling down to the hard issues of trade and economic relations in their second day of summit talks.

The two leaders chatted through an interpreter as Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko signed the agreements on agricultural, oceanographic, transportation and cultural exchanges in the ornate 18th Century surroundings of the State Department Benjamin Franklin Room.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz also signed the agricultural agreement as presidential assistant Henry A. Kissinger, Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, high Soviet officials, senators, cabinet officers, and others looked on.

Immediately after the signing, corks popped and the two statesmen joined several hundred dignitaries in toasting the accords which supplement the agreements President Nixon and Brezhnev concluded at the Moscow summit talks in May 1972.

At one point, Nixon and Brezhnev linked arms, and sipped from their glasses in a gesture of unity as photographers clicked away.

"Here's the best politician in the room," beamed the President, gesturing at Brezhnev. The Soviet leader, dressed in a light grey suit with two red-and-gold Order of Lenin medals on his chest, smiled and shook hands with many of the guests.

Brezhnev even drew a round of applause as he spilled some champagne on his cuff and the floor, then playfully tried to shield his face from photographers with a napkin. The incident recalled a moment at the Moscow summit when the Soviet leader accidentally sloshed some wine on Rogers. This time, some observers thought, Brezhnev spilled the wine purposefully, as a joke.

Leaving the State Department, Brezhnev rode in President Nixon's black limousine — with Soviet and American flags fluttering from the front fenders —back to his Blair House residence to lunch with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Opposition is strong in the Congress toward granting the Soviet Union normal trade terms —most favored nation treatment —unless the Soviet government permits Jews to emigrate to Israel entirely freely.

Nixon and Brezhnev were continuing their summit talks in mid-afternoon, and White Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said that they would concentrate later on trade and economic matters. The Soviet Union is proposing a number of multi-billion dollar deals for developing Siberian natural resources, and significantly boosting mutual trade.

The White House spokesman said that the two statesmen would turn to a wide range of international matters when they continue their talks at Camp David, the presidential mountaintop retreat in Maryland today and Thursday.

During the week of summit talks in Washington, Camp David and San Clemente, Calif., the United States and the Soviet Union are expected to conclude several more agreements.

The two statesmen are also seeking to reach broad new guidelines which would give a new forward impetus to the Soviet-American Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT). These negotiations are now attempting to reach limitations on a range of offensive nuclear weaponry.

Food costs soaring toward record rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Grocery prices this year will average about 12.5 per cent above 1972, the biggest one-year increase in 26 years, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The announcement, marking the third time the department has boosted its official estimate of average 1973 food prices, added that President Nixon's decision to freeze all retail food prices had staved off an even bigger increase.

One expert said that without the freeze the 1973 average might have been as high as 14 per cent above last year.

Nixon's price ceiling action will keep July-August retail prices from topping their early June levels, the department said. It added that if present demand and supply forecasts prove accurate, "little if any further price increases will be forthcoming after the 60-day ceiling period."

Agriculture Department economists last fall had predicted 1973 retail food prices would be up only 3.5 per cent from 1972. But early in the year the estimate was raised to 6.5 per cent and in May, as farm and food prices continued to rise, it was hiked again to 10 per cent.

The economists said the soaring prices "reflected unprecedented domestic and foreign demand for commodities in the face of diminished stocks and uncertainty over the extent of increases in 1973 crop production."

If weather conditions permit, the report said, farmers will harvest record crops this year, with marketings up 5 per cent from 1972. But they said the boom in livestock feed prices apparently has forced many livestock, dairy and poultry producers to cool off expansion plans and is "preventing much easing in prices in these markets."

Evidence locked up

WASHINGTON — Evidence against John W. Dean III gathered by federal prosecutors was put under judicial lock and key so the prosecutors can prove they had the evidence before Dean testified before the Senate Watergate committee.

Pollution law delay requested

DETROIT — General Motors asked the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Tuesday to grant a one-year delay in meeting 1976 clean air standards for removing nitrogen oxides from automobile exhausts. GM, the second of the major U.S. automakers to seek the delay, said it "has not found any emission control for oxides of nitrogen which satisfies the emission controls requirements." Chrysler also is seeking a delay. Ford and American Motors are considering similar action.

Sub station closings opposed

HARRISBURG — The House Law and Justice Committee Tuesday sent to the floor a bill to curb the State Police practice of closing its substations in rural areas. Rep. Joseph V. Zord Jr., R-Allegheny, committee chairman, said the bill was amended to require that no substation be closed until the State Police commissioner holds a public hearing in the local area. The bill originally barred the commissioner from closing substations without the consent of the legislature.

'Taj Mahal' bill approved

HARRISBURG — The House Tuesday approved, 187-5, the "Taj Mahal" bill to limit school construction costs, clearing the way for Gov. Milton J. Shapp to sign it into law. The bill, approved without debate, was the result of a compromise worked out in a House-Senate Conference Committee. It sets up a formula, based on the number of pupils, that limits school construction costs. A school district must get voter approval if the limit is exceeded. The Senate approved the bill unanimously Monday. It does not apply to Philadelphia or Pittsburgh.

Laird explains changes

WASHINGTON — Melvin Laird, President Nixon's chief domestic adviser, briefed Republican senators Tuesday on the newly restructured White House chain of command designed to improve relations with Capitol Hill. Laird, who addressed a Senate GOP Policy Committee luncheon, declined to talk to reporters after the meeting. But Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Tex., said the former defense secretary discussed the "overall restructuring" at the White House. Tower said Laird told the panel that Bryce Harlow will assume "general supervision of all congressional relations."

Seventh person convicted in Yablonski slayings

ERIE (UPI) — Former United Mine Workers (UMW) official Albert Pass was found guilty Tuesday of murder in the 1969 killings of UMW "reform" leader Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and two daughters.

Pass is the seventh person — and the highest of three ex-union officials — to be convicted in the case.

Special prosecutor Richard Sprague told a post-trial news conference, "It was obvious from the trial testimony someone in Washington gave the green light to Pass."

Sprague did not mention any name but he had referred repeatedly during his prosecution of the murders to a $20,000 union fund, allegedly used to finance the killings, that was approved by W.A. "Tony" Boyle, then the UMW president, ostensibly for union organizing purposes.

Pass was accused of obtaining the Boyle-approved $20,000 fund and having it distributed in "expense checks" to members of a special "organizing committee" in Kentucky and Tennessee. The checks were cashed and the money returned to Pass who then, the prosecution charged, used it to pay for the killings.

An Erie County Court jury of seven men and five women deliberated about five hours before finding Pass guilty on three murder counts, each of which carried a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Pass, 54, Middlesboro, Ky., a former member of the UMW international executive board, held his head up and looked every juror in the eye as the jury was polled.

Defense attorney Harold Gondelman said he would appeal the verdict "by Friday."

Sprague said the verdict was "another step in the proceedings of this case, which I said was going from the end to the beginning."

Energy cutbacks proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration officials Tuesday outlined plans under consideration to beat an energy crisis including tax incentives for cars that use less gas, and energy consumption labels on appliances and homes.

The members of two House committees who heard the report generally approved but urged the officials to act faster and asked why federal agencies had not set an example for the public by cutting energy consumption.

Stephen A. Wakefield, assistant Interior secretary, replied that Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton has "given up his air conditioned limousine for an ordinary Plymouth."

"Three cheers for Secretary Morton," said Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on conservation and national resources.

Officials of the Departments of Transportation, Interior, Commerce and Housing and Urban Development and of the Environmental Protection Agency said they were putting together voluntary guidelines to help manufacturers and consumers use available energy more efficiently.

Later they may propose tax surcharges on cars that use more gasoline, labeling applicances by the rate of fuel consumption, scaled down taxes on more efficient grades of fuel and higher heat insulation standards for new dwellings.

Astronauts work outside Skylab

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 1 astronauts walked in space Tuesday to retrieve priceless pictures of the sun and make repairs with "a hammer and a feather" to ready the big space station for another crew next month.

Scientists hoped the solar photos would uncover secrets to the enormous energy in earth's nearest, life-giving star.

Charles "Pete" Conrad and Paul J. Weitz climbed around the huge solar observatory mounted piggy-back on the station for 96 minutes. Joseph P. Kerwin remained inside monitoring systems aboard the 100-ton spacecraft.

The pilots, scheduled for a 9:48 a.m. EDT Friday splashdown to end man's longest spaceflight, needed only half the allotted time for their second spacewalk to fix the research ship.

While Weitz tended his lifeline, Conrad banged a battery charger switch to life with hammer blows and then with a small brush dusted away a tiny white thread from a lens on one of Skylab's seven solar telescopes.

"We used a hammer and a feather out there today and did some good with both of them," Kerwin radioed Houston.

The astronauts also received congratulations from Vladimir A. Shatalov on behalf of his team of Soviet cosmonauts.

"We sincerely congratulate the courageous crew of the Skylab astronauts on your achievements in conquering outer space," Shatalov said in a message relayed by mission control. "Wishing you successful completion of your program and safe return to our beautiful blue planet earth."

Flight director Milt Windler said today's schedule would be light. It includes a medical experiment and an early morning news conference from orbit.

The astronauts also received approval to take 400 feet of home movies inside the 118-foot space station.

"We're batting 1,000," said backup commander Russell L. Schweickart, who worked in mission control with Windler during the spacewalk.

Two of four trapped in tiny submarine die

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Two scientists, bottled up for three days in a tiny pressurized submarine that rescuers dared not open, were declared dead Tuesday from the numbing cold they encountered in the ocean's depths.

The two other men who survived the ordeal aboard the submarine were resting in seclusion Tuesday at an undisclosed location.

Dr. David Youngblood, the physician aboard the mother ship, Sea Diver, said hope for the two was finally abandoned at 8 a.m. EDT after nearly 21 hours had passed without their showing any signs of life.

The victims were Al Stover, 51, Juno Beach, Fla., and Clayton Link, 31, son of the designer of the ill-fated 21-foot minisub, Sea Link.

Youngblood, who talked with reporters when the mother ship docked here, said officials waited until the last possible moment before declaring the victims dead because "there was a long-shot assumption that there was a spark of life left."

He said the cause of death had been listed as "cold exposure." Temperatures aboard the sub had dropped to 45 degrees.

Legislators breaking stalemate

DER winning round in moth battle

By JOHN L. MOORE
Ottaway News Service

HARRISBURG — Pressure from Pocono legislators may be breaking a months long stalemate which has curtailed Pennsylvania's battle against the gypsy moths.

Under pressure from the lawmakers, the governor's office stepped into the picture Tuesday and took measures to get the Department of Environmental Resources the laboratory it needs to breed insect parasites to eat the gypsy moths.

The department had to scuttle plans to use the insects against the moths this year because a sister agency, The Department of Property and Supplies, failed to come up with the lab.

But less than eight hours after three Pocono representatives called upon Ralph Tive, a special assistant to Gov. Shapp, Tuesday morning, a high environmental official reported a laboratory looks like it is in the offing.

"We're on the threshhold of breaking the deadlock," said Donald Oesterling, a deputy secretary of the environment. "I spent the whole day on it."

Dr. Maurice Goddard, Pennsylvania's environmental secretary, has said plans to use the parasites next year will be jeopardized unless his department gets the laboratory by late next month.

Oesterling promised an announcement as soon as the lab is secured and indicated this could occur as quickly as today.

The representatives who met with Shapp's assistant — Russell Kowalyshyn, D-Northampton, William Foster, R-Wayne, and Raphael Musto, D-Luzerne — emerged from the meeting optomistic Tuesday and felt they had impressed Tive about the urgency of the moth problem.

"They realize the urgency of the matter now," Foster said, and Kowalyshyn remarked, "the laboratory must be set up this summer. Otherwise, next year's program will have to be abandoned."

The three House members were not the only Pocono legislators upset by the problem.

Sen. T. Newell Wood, R-Luzerne, spent a second day waiting to see Gov. Shapp without success and appeared pleased when told about Oesterling's statement. "As long as we get it, I don't care who gets the credit," he said.

And Sen. Frederick Hobbs, the Schuylkill Republican, was also pleased with the apparent breakthrough.

Brezhnev explains Jewish emigration to U.S. leaders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, seeking U. S. trade concessions, Tuesday told a group of more than 20 members of Congress that well over 95 per cent of the Jews who wish to leave the Soviet Union have been given permission to go.

Brezhnev lobbied the lawmakers, all but two of them senators, to drop their opposition to trade concessions to the Soviet Union and pave the way for mutually beneficial economic arrangements. A sizable bloc in Congress, led by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., has been blocking implementation of U. S.-Soviet trade agreements in protest of the Soviet tax on Jews leaving Russia, particularly those wanting to emigrate to Israel.

Senators leaving Blair House, where they were Brezhnev's guests, said the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party delivered a two-hour speech during the lunch, which lasted for well over four hours. He then answered questions briefly, including one on most of the lawmakers' minds—the problem of emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., reading from his notes, said Brezhnev cited figures showing that of 61,000 Jews who last year applied to leave the Soviet Union, 60,200 applications were granted.

Humphrey said Brezhnev reported that of 11,400 applications for Jewish emigration received in the first five months of this year, 10,100 were granted.

Brezhnev said that of 738 applications denied this year, 258 had been granted just before he left the Soviet Union, 177 dropped their requests and 30 were not even residents of the Soviet Union.

Brezhnev said 149 applications that were denied for security reasons are now under active reconsideration.

Asked if he detected any willingness by Brezhnev to compromise on the emotional Jewish emigration issue, Humphrey said, "Yes, I do."

Humphrey, Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., all said Brezhnev emphasized his desire to increase economic contact between the two countries. To do this, the senators related, Brezhnev said the United States must agree to extend most favored national tariff treatment to the Soviet Union.

Humphrey said Brezhnev emphasized the untapped natural resources of the Soviet Union and said he would welcome a long-term partnership with American businessmen to develop those resources for the benefit of both nations.

Asked if Brezhnev had lobbied the lawmakers during the lunch, which delayed by three-quarters of an hour the start of Brezhnev's meetings with Nixon, McGee said he had.

McGee said Brezhnev declared he was prepared to engage in serious bargaining with Nixon on economic, military and political issues. To be successful, McGee quoted Brezhnev, "Both sides have to give and both sides have to gain."

Open meeting law endorsed

Stop gap funds approved

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Legislation providing $180 million in stopgap appropriations to operate state government next month, and to open state and local government meetings, cleared the House Appropriations Committee Tuesday.

The panel also sent to the House floor a Senate bill appropriating $615 million from the motor license fund to cover some capital expenditures.

The Republican-backed stopgap bills allow $100 million to operate state government through July and $80 million for welfare payments during the same period.

Rep. Jack Seltzer, R-Lebanon, the committee chairman, said the measures would ensure that state government had money if the budget for fiscal 1973-74 is stalled. The current fiscal year ends June 30.

Rep. Martin P. Mullen, D-Philadelphia, ranking minority member of the committee, objected to the bills. He said members of a conference committee on the annual budget would be encouraged to avoid compromise. The party-line vote was 17-8.

The open meetings bill, which already cleared the House State Government Committee, was sent to the Appropriations panel to determine its fiscal impact.

Seltzer said the impact on state government could not be determined. Some members noted a requirement for stenographers at all meetings would mean additional cost to government.

Rep. Eugene Scanlon, D-Allegheny, moved to table the bill, but the motion to report it to the floor had already passed by 13-9.

The bill would require open meetings if any official action is taken, including votes. Violators would be fined $100 and costs. Executive or closed sessions would be allowed only for discussion.

The motor license fund appropriations bill, already passed by the Senate, sparked partisan debate before it passed by voice vote.

Mullen said it did not include the $35 million in revenue sharing for highway repairs proposed by Gov. Milton J. Shapp. He said Republicans want to use that money for tax relief.

Seltzer countered by saying the best way to fund highway repairs is by increasing motor license fees or other costs to taxpayers.

The panel also:

—Approved two bills that increase the salaries of justices in second class counties.

—Defeated a measure to appropriate to the Agriculture Department $160,000 to build portable horse stalls for use at the Farm Show complex.

Kelley won't bow to politics on job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI director-designate Clarence M. Kelley said Tuesday he had no intention of bowing to political pressure in the job, and in effect invited senators to reject his nomination if they do not believe him.

Kelley, a former FBI agent and chief of police in Kansas City, Mo., for the past 12 years, made the pledge to the Senate Judiciary Committee at the outset of hearings on his appointment.

"I would hope," said Kelley, "that if you don't get the man you want, that you should persist."

"No one should be confirmed who bows to political pressure," he added. "I've never bowed to political pressure and I don't mean to start."

Kelley, 61, who was with the FBI for 21 years, also told the committee he would welcome consultations with a congressional oversight committee which, in his view, should "be thoroughly cognizant of the needs of the FBI."

President Nixon selected Kelley to be permanent head of the FBI after his first choice, L. Patrick Gray III, ran into trouble before the judiciary committee in connection with the Watergate scandal and his nomination was withdrawn.

On Tuesday one of the committee members, Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said he wanted assurances that —in view of disclosures about Watergate —the confidentiality of FBI files be safeguarded under Kelley.

"Now we are on notice that a preoccupation with national security makes them open files because somebody smiles crooked," Hart said.

Earlier in the hearing, Kelley smiled as the committee heard praise of his qualifications from Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, Missouri's senators, Thomas F. Eagleton and Stuart Symington, and his Democratic congressman, William J. Randall.

Richardson said Kelley would answer the committee's requirements that the nominee have a law enforcement background, no partisan political background, and no connection with the Watergate scandal.

"He has not been politically active in Kansas City and no one has asked him his politics in the course of gaining his background," Richardson said.

Senate Democratic Whip Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia has predicted quick approval of Kelley.

Authority given

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Banking Committee voted 24 to 4 Tuesday to give President Nixon clear and strong authority to restrict exports when strong foreign demand helps drive up domestic prices.

The bill sent to the House floor by the committee would make it possible for the administration to limit the export of farm products.

Nixon to sign tax treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union will sign an income tax treaty today, reflecting their joint hopes of greatly increased trade.

It will be the fifth agreement to emerge from the Washington summit meeting.

The treaty is expected to cover such matters as the tax treatment of business established in one country by the other and the tax treatment of business visitors, royalties and interest payments.

The treaty also will probably grant reciprocal tax privileges to individuals. That is, if a certain portio of an American's income is taxed in the Soviet Union, then Russians residing in the United States would get the same treatment from the Internal Revenue Service. If credits or refunds are allowed in one country, this also will apply in the other.

Tax treaties generally are designed to prevent double taxation and thus promote trade and investment. The United States has similar treaties with about 35 nations.

The treaty will require Senate approval. Signing the agreement this morning at the Treasury Department will be Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev, the department said.

The two governments held preliminary talks on the tax convention last October in Washington.

Imports make up barracks

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first article in a four-part series on the Fern Ridge State Police Substation, its county and interstate patrols, and its radar equipment.

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

BLAKESLEE — There's an organization located just north of the Effort mountain that has received several imports considered so rare, a selling price isn't even applicable.

The new acquisitions are not highly valued because they are antiques; in fact, they are rather young. And they're not for sale, even though they're not considered rare collectors' items.

The imports in question happen to be state policemen who have decided to transfer to the Fern Ridge State Police Substation from other assignments throughout the state.

Technically referred to as "imports," the men help to make up the unique complement of interstate and county troops that both operate out of the Fern Ridge barracks.

Under the command of Sgt. Joseph P. Zuber, the interstate force contains 19 troopers and two corporals. It patrols a 74-mile run of Rte. 80 from Stroudsburg to Hickory Run and serves as a backup force to its sister troop when needed.

The county force, under the command of Sgt. Dominic Fanelli, contains 23 troopers and three corporals. Three of the policemen are criminal men. The troop patrols the western end of the county except for Eldred and Polk Townships, which are covered by the Lehighton barracks.

The merger of the two forces took place when the interstate troop left Mt. Pocono.

The move, a preamble to the institution of an all-encompassing, centrally located substation in Pocono Township, is described as "favorable" and "mutually beneficial" by both sergeants despite the fact the complement of men at Fern Ridge has doubled.

"Under normal conditions we expect to have a patrol at the scene in a matter of 10 or 15 minutes," explained Zuber. "We dispatch the nearest patrol car. Sometimes, however, that officer is engaged in some other activity and this response time may be longer. We have to ask the public for patience and understanding in these special circumstances."

The county police force coverage is divided into six major zones. Anywhere from two to four men will be on patrol at any one time. Usually one man is assigned to a car, but the shift is doubled after midnight.

"We assign the men by a process of selective enforcement or where the need is greatest," explained Fanelli. "We base assignments on accident and crime rate, day of the week, and time of day."

He said a state policeman serves five eight hour shifts a week and is assigned to one particular zone each day. It is mostly up to the officer's own discretion where he patrols, sets up radar, etc.

The county force patrols three main zones along Rte. 80. Its coverage is mainly traffic. On a typical weekend, the Friday afternoon schedule contains four patrols. The force is minimal, however, after midnight.

Zuber, too, stressed the importance of making assignments based on the time of day and time of week. On the interstate he said Friday and Sunday nights were busiest.

"The function of the state police is prevention and this is an intangible thing," said Zuber, who indicated radar was a good enforcement tool. "We want to present the people with an image of a policeman who is there to provide a service. He's not just there to arrest people. His job is to help, to teach, to advise."

"The dilemma of the policeman is trying to contain people so a problem is not enhanced," he continued. "In trying to do the job, it's the same people who are offended when you try to contain them."

Both officers emphasized the need for preventative measures in relationship to crime and accidents, and they stressed the need to think clearly and use good common sense in case of emergencies.

The experienced troopers also pointed up the need for education before carrying even such simple items as flashlights or flares.

"As an example of misunderstanding in this area, the state police had set up flares at the scene of an accident recently," said Fanelli, "and this guy came barrelling through. When we asked him what the flares meant, he said, 'Danger, get out of there as fast as you can.' "

Zuber emphasized that many motorists set up flares when they really aren't necessary and cause more problems than they help.

In their final comments, both officers commended area residents.

"There are very sociable people up here," said Fanelli. "They have much more patrol understanding and they aren't as demanding."

"I think one of the reasons for this," said Zuber, "is that a lot of times, they are able to resolve their own problems.

Residents urged to pick up tags

POCONO PINES — Residents of Tobyhanna Twp. planning to use Long Pond Road during the Schaefer 500 trials or race should pick up "local resident" tags from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday at the office of the township clerk in the Fire Hall at Pocono Pines.

Tags will assure residents of passage on the road in the event it should be closed during trials and race.

P.A. class donates to center

PEN ARGYL — The Pen Argyl graduating class of 1973 recently voted to donate $500 to the Barsky unit of the Center for Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery in Saigon.

The center is a project of Children's Medical Relief International, and was founded by Dr. Arthur J. Barsky, famed plastic surgeon.

The $500 gift by the senior class will be enough to rebuild a child's face.

The Barsky Center is the only hospital of its kind in Vietnam and the only hospital in the world specializing in plastic and reconstructive surgery for children.

It is a non-political unit, treating both North and South Vietnamese children.

Sheri Brauch, class president, said, "We wanted to do something for what already existed, and this is a way we can help."

Milford's noise ordinance to crack down on truckers

MILFORD — The Borough of Milford, perhaps the hardest hit by truck traffic between I-80 and I-84, is beginning to crack down on truckers traveling through the town.

Tired of being "nice guys" at their own expense, borough officials have passed a noise control ordinance and are considering a variety of other truck control measures.

The noise ordinance names a multitude of things which can be cited for disturbing residents' peace — like yelling, animals or drums.

The ordinance will fine offenders between $10 and $25 for each offense. Some residents, however, feel that the fines should be higher and, therefore, more of a deterrent.

"Some truckers may just shrug their shoulders at a $10 fine," complained Mrs. Jill Davis, a member of the Community Club, an organization which has raised a great cry about noise regulations.

Mrs. Davis and other residents said that they had approached truckers asking them to turn off their motors and had been virtually laughed at.

Mayor Donald Howe cited Poor Richard's, on the corner of Harford and Broad Streets, as a test case for the new ordinance.

"They've been playing rock music until 2 a.m.!" he exclaimed. The new ordinance provides for some loud noises, such as construction clamor, during specified hours.

The borough council has also asked their solicitor to investigate installing "no truck parking" signs on the borough's main streets.

While businessmen would not tolerate no parking at all on the main thoroughfares, they might agree with keeping trucks away, the council feels.

More cooperation with state police, with whom the borough has been fencing for enforcement of noise regulations was urged by citizens.

The state police patrol the borough when Milford police are off duty. Residents say they often fine truckers $15 for leaving motors running.

Pike County fire officials ratify final school plans

BLOOMING GROVE — The Pike County Fire Federation ratified plans for their fall fire school at their Monday night meeting at the Blooming Grove Fire House.

Federation president Leo Kretchik said more than 125 firemen, including eight junior firemen from the Tafton Fire Co., will participate in the Fire School Sept. 8-9.

Nine state certified fire instructors, headed by Clarence Strunk of the Acme Hose Co. of East Stroudsburg, will teach four classes. All of the instructors will be from Monroe and Northampton Counties.

The classes will include — Masks (Scot Pack) and small extinguisher at the county fire school building in Blooming Grove Township.

—Hose fitting and ladders at the Blooming Grove Fire House.

—Car rescues and car fires on Interstate 84 and Rte. 739.

—Drafting, pumping and relay at McConnell's Pond in Hemlock Farms.

Kretchik is hopeful more companies will take on junior firemen in the future. Only Tafton and Bushkill have junior firemen, and Bushkill is participating in the Monroe County Fire School Sept. 15-16 in Mount Pocono.

In other business, Bill Stewart, Tafton Ambulance Chief, said the dozen ambulance corps in Pike and Wayne Counties will be forming an ambulance association.

Jim Arthur of the Matamoras Fire Co. said his company received $4,000 from Matamoras Borough in revenue sharing funds. The funds will be used towards the company's building funds.

Arthur noted firemen would like to obtain a hanger from the old Matamoras Airport as a fire house.

Council awards repair bid

MILFORD — The Borough Council of Milford accepted the only bid submitted for tarring and chipping borough roads.

The bid, from Keystone Paving Co., Lake Ariel, totaled $12,495.50.

Work on the roads should begin within ten days after the contract is signed.

Resort fined for violation

MILFORD — The Tamiment Resort and Country Club paid a $36 fine and court costs Monday on a violation of the state's Cigarette Tax Act.

Garbage crisis not solved yet

William F. Quinn to the contrary, Monroe County's problems with sold waste disposal are far from over.

Quinn, one of the county's commissioners, said Monday that the county's solid waste disposal quandary had been resolved with the beginning of a waste haulers' compacting system in Hamilton Township.

Apparently, he has not been reading the reports filtering into the commissioners' office. There is much yet to do in that area before that particular problem can be said to be solved.

Or is Monroe County once again to be saddled with a "permanent" solution that will be obsolete before the ink is dry on the contract? We have been operating with a deficient solid waste disposal system for years now, with study after study being conducted to resolve the problem once and for all, forgetting that studies alone do not do the job.

The studies still have to be implemented.

The situation came to the point that the only quick way out seemed to be a proposal from private waste hauler contractors to compact the county's garbage and haul it to a Northampton County site. That the situation came to this point was a tribute to the lack of farsightedness of county officials in the first place.

But now, when the county's newly established general authority is on the verge of coming up with a reasonable and long-term solution, we find some county officials declaring the crisis at an end.

On what? On the basis of an essentially temporary solution? And an agreement that the proposers of that solution will have their investment guaranteed against the possibility that the county's taxpayers (and waste generators) might find another, cheaper way out?

It is absurd to think that anyone willing to take a chance with private capital should be given a government guarnatee that his investment should be insured against a change in circumstance. That in itself goes against the grain of a true believer in the private enterprise, capitalistic system: You study the possibilities and take your chances.

But to consider such a system as a complete solution and ignore the problem (until it rears its ugly head again, which will happen for sure) is foolishness of the ultimate sort. Our problems with solid waste disposal aren't that easy to solve, nor will they vanish as easily as some seem to hope.

The matter needs and deserves further study and further action. Otherwise, we will be faced with the same problem in a very few years, when we should be free to be involved in contemplating solutions to other problems not yet dreamed of, but just as sure to arise.

Saving youth . . . ?

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives Monday defeated yet another attempt to lower the drinking age (of alcoholic beverages, that is). And we have no doubt the defenders of the status quo are pretty proud of their accomplishment.

Well, we're not going to probe their motives. We are, however, going to question their reasoning (or lack of it).

Quoth the astute Rep. Joseph Zeller, D-Lehigh, "Can you see youngsters coming into high school with a six-pack? They could sit there and get all drunked up."

Ridiculous, of course. There may be sound reasons for not allowing 18-year-olds the right to drink (although they have the right to do just about everything else, including own bars and taverns) but we haven't heard them yet. Besides, how many adults get drunk at work? Only the nuts, of whom adults have a few.

New York and, lately, New Jersey, have given 18-year-olds the right to belly up to a bar with their fellow adults (the law says so) and we have yet to see drastic results from the move.

In fact, psychologists who make a good living studying the oddities of the human condition swear that there are no more problems with allowing younger persons to take a legal drink than with allowing their elders to do the same.

We have given adult rights to those young people already. (Maybe that's the ticket; they are people, even though young, so why not treat them as such?) Why not, then, the right to hoist a toast to the winning of those rights? It all seems a bit foolish, and a bit late, to insist on the exclusivity of the bar to us older, more mature, less-liable-to-get-drunk (?) types right now.

Nixon endures Watergate

WASHINGTON — Personal fiends who have visited President Nixon lately have found him more annoyed than dispirited over the Watergate revelations. What annoys him is the time Watergate has taken from his preparations for the summit meeting with Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

The president believes he established an understanding with Brezhnev in Moscow last year. They now trust one another enough to proceed with meaningul negotiations, the president suggests.

After Nixon's return from Iceland, he appeared haggard. But he explains this wasn't from worry over Watergate but from lack of sleep in Iceland. He found it difficult to sleep in the land of the midnight sun because even the blinds couldn't shut out the brightness at night.

Friends who ask how they can help with the Watergate problem get only an appreciative shrug from the president but no specific suggestions. He will leave it to them, he says, to decide what statements they wish to make in his support.

The mention of John Mitchell or Bob Haldeman causes the president merely to shake his head, as if he doesn't know what to think of his two former close advisers. The President insists he had no advance knowledge of the Watergate break-in or the obstruction of justice. "Stupid," is the kindest word he has for the Waterbugging.

He recalls that he thought the best politics last year was to attend to the presidency, that he left the political tactics to "the boys."

But to all who ask, Richard Nixon makes one thing perfectly clear. He has no intention of resigning.

For guppy lovers at the highest reaches of government, the taxpayers provide pet fish and an aquarist to attend them.

The aforesaid aquarist, known less loftily as a fish-tank tender, is Floyd Crawford. His calling in life is to service some 40 fish tanks that the National Aquarium has loaned to senators, representatives and other pampered poobahs of government.

Some of the fanciest fish — Blue Moons, Angel Fish and Kissing Gouramis — have been consigned to Vice President Agnew's domain. It's not Agnew who is infatuated with Kissing Gouramis, we have been informed, but his aides.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler, who refers to his liberal critics as "bleeding hearts," appropriately keeps Bleeding Heart Tetras in his office aquarium. However, the efficicent Ziegler won't permit his office routine to be interrupted by the care and feeding of his blushing fish. The visiting aquarist has strict instructions never to tend Ziegler's fish tank while the great man is in the office.

Perhaps the most menacing pet in the federal fishery is a miniature Black Shark on loan to George Gauzza, the Interior Department's boss of management operations.

But of all Washington's famous fish fanciers, none was more devoted than the late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, whose bulldog visage and staccato speech were the terror of crooks and Communists. But he was a softie when it came to his pet goldfish.

At the first chill of winter, he would deliver his special goldfish to the National Aquarium to be looked after during the cold. But as soon as the weather warmed, Hoover's personal bodyguard would appear to pick up the golden dandies. If one of his goldfish appeared ill, Hoover would order an aide to call the Aquarium for a diagnosis.

The aquarium is beseiged with calls from bigwigs about their fish problems. One may want a red fish to go with the office decor. Others want their fish tanks moved from one side of the room to another, a maneuver that requires four men. One congressional office called six times in a single day about the illness of some Siamese fighting fish.

Once, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., demanded a salt water tank, in which he wanted to display clams, lobsters and other marine life native to his home state. The fish experts finally talked him out of it.

Every morning, Aquarist Floyd Crawford climbs into his official government truck and begins his rounds. On a typical day, he might drop off some food for Indiana Sen. Vance Hartke's Austrialian Rainbows, then clean out Hawaii Sen. Daniel Inouye's fish tank.

In answer to an anxious call from Ohio Rep. William Mishall's office, Crawford might examine the congressman's red Swordtails and pronounce them sick with ich. Then he might stop by Pennsylvania Rep. Joseph McDade's office and dip out a dead Angel Fish for a squeamish secretary.

Then he might drive downtown to inspect the aquarium of the Interior Department's communications director, Robert Kelly, who is down to two fish and is complaining about it. Next, there are fish tanks at the U.S. Information Agency and General Services Administration that need tending.

Research report

The dollar: What next?

By RALPH C. DEANS

The Administration's puzzlement over the dwindling value of the dollar prior to June 13 was understandable. The balance of trade and payments appeared to be improving and that usually signals the time when currency speculators — for want of a better term — begin to buy dollars, driving up their value. So why were the gnomes of Zurich selling dollars?

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz told the House Ways and Means Committee June 4 he couldn't understand it. Since our prospects for limiting inflation were "better than most other countries," it seemed the rest of the world was out of step. Jack L. Bennett, Deputy Under Secretary of the Treasury, said that "irrational factors" were responsible for the dollar's continued decline.

In announcing the reimposition of a freeze on prices, President Nixon did not mention the sinking dollar. But it was almost certainly on his mind. A continued flight from the dollar abroad, along with a bearish stock market and screaming inflation at home, were all signs that the American economic boom was wobbling badly.

Devaluation enormous

During the first six months of this year, the dollar underwent an enormous de facto devaluation — ranging from 5.8 per cent in terms of British currency to 28.2 per cent in terms of Swiss francs. And that was on top of "official" devaluations of 8.6 per cent in August 1971, and a further 10 per cent last February in terms of gold.

The reason for the latest attack on the dollar, most analysts agree, was a pervasive lack of confidence in American currency. The holders of dollars abroad saw no end to inflation and, it was said, did not believe the Nixon administration had the clout or the will to meet the problem head on. In desperation, the overseas holders of dollars bought gold — driving the price to a record peak of $127 an ounce on June 5.

The high price of gold is a further symptom of a general crisis of confidence. American officials have told the specualtors over and over again that gold is being "demonetized" and has no financial value. The trouble, as stock analyst Heinz H. Beil put it, is that "people no longer believe a damn thing that anybody says, whether he be a businessman or a politician."

Still questions

President Nixon has now moved against inflation and that should remove a major doubt in the minds of the owners of dollars abroad. But any greedy speculator worth his salt will still be wondering how far he can trust the American government. Will the freeze really damp down inflation? What will happen when the freeze ends in mid-August? Has the threat of a recession been removed?

Curiously enough, monetary officials should be hoping that the speculators do not put too much confidence in Phase IV. If they do, there will be a massive flight to the dollar and that could be almost as disruptive as the flight from the dollar that has been taking place for months.

There is no end in sight to the succession of monetary crises. An $80 billion pool of Eurodollars in Europe, made up largely of "hot" money seeking a profit, can be moved quickly from commodity to commodity and from country to country, leaving governments to patch up their ravished economies as best they can. There is not likely to be any international monetary peace until somebody figures out a way to control these "outlaw" funds.

Columnar colleagues

Counter - reaction

By RUSSELL KIRK

To the chagrin of some of my columnar colleagues, self-righteousness in the mass media and among the politicians about the Watergate business is beginning to vex many people. I have been receiving numerous letters from readers of this column, saying in effect that while the national executive force behaved badly, various American Pharisees are behaving worse.

"The sadness of Watergate is inescapable for persons possessing a Christian conscience," a theological student in Missouri writes to me. "Anger over the affair is understandable. But a greater sadness and a no less justifiable anger is merited by the Christian individual who observes guile on the part of Christians wishing to implicate the President and glee on the part of these and others who believe that the President and his associates are being discredited. There is no room for guile; neither is there room for glee about such things, in the Christian heart.

"Christian charity demands, in response to Watergate, Christian conduct," my correspondent continues.

"Part of this conduct is, ironically enough, that which was suggested by the President himself on the eve of April 30. He pleaded for Americans to pray for his office and for the government of our people. There are more activistic pursuits in which we can engage for the working out of our Christian purposes, but one thing is sure: the quietism of earnest prayer for our nation's leaders will outdistance by far the sadism of our personal glee and guile."

A professor in Minnesota, with much experience in Europe of persecution and espionage, sends me his conclusions about Watergate. "It dawns on me that the whole Watergate business centered upon President Nixon's direct order to stop the leaks of most secret meetings, decisions, plans, etc.," he says. "But the U.S.A. has no Secret Documents Act, and the heads of the relevant government agencies were timid and naive about ways of doing that job . . .

"Clearly, the Watergate affair had nothing to do with the election, which is why McGovern in all frankness said that he had not the slightest idea what those people expected to get out of bugging the Democratic headquarters. Senator Brooks made the same point, that no decisions of any importance or even meetings of importance take place there."

Why, then, the wiretapping of the building? Because spies against the Administration met in that headquarters, though not with the knowledge of the big men in the Democratic Party, my correspondent suggests. He means people of Daniel Ellsberg's kidney, intent upon damaging the Nixon Administration, at whatever cost to national policies. Such agents are very successful nowadays: if they weren't, Jack Anderson couldn't have got his fingers on secret grand jury transcripts.

"In other words," this professor goes on, "the leak business was big business, and the only way the White House could get money to finance counter-action was from campaign funds. That brings in a whole chain of underhand jobs, all done because the President knew that they could not be done legally. For this reason, I think that Nixon was duty-bound, right after the election or right after the papers began involving his subordinantes, to come out openly and state the dilemma in which the nation finds itself, without a law permitting (as other governmnts permit) the security agencies to do what is necessary to maintain national security."

From other politically astute people of some reputation, I receive similar analyses of the motive behind the Watergate burglary. If this analysis is correct, Mr. John Mitchell ought to have said so long ago; the public would have understood hard necessity, if such it was.

However this may be, much popular sentiment inclines now toward the view that though the Nixon Administration bungled, Watergate scarcely is the greatest sin in the dark history of American politics. A little more self-righteous oratory from the mass media, and Watergate might restore Mr. Nixon's popularity. That sort of thing has happened to him before.

Jim Bishop

Boys are boys

"For God's sake don't mention my name as I now have all the trouble one man can stand. My daughter, who graduates from high school this year, has, for days, been describing her escort to the Senior Prom as "The Brain'; 'A Dreamboat'; 'A Living Doll'; and 'The Man.' Last night I saw him.

"Mr. Bishop, the night of the prom arrived, the doorbell rang, and as I opened the door there stood a creature that was a cross between an ape, and one of the Smith Brothers or a House of David ballplayer. His features were obscured by a motley mass of hair on his face; the hair on his head flowed below his shoulders.

"I could not understand why this creature was at my house so I inquired 'What do you want?' As near as I can remember, he yelled: 'Hiya, Dad. Tell your slick chick that The Man is here and come quick as I have some bread to spread.'

"My Irish temper got the better of me. I yelled: 'I'm not your dad and I'm mad. Now Hip, I'm going to fatten your lip.' My fist hit his chin and decked him. I went for a kitchen knife. My wife and daughter screamed 'Don't kill him!' The punk got off the floor and raced to a hot rod.

"Now, Mr. Bishop, the lights went on in the neighbors' houses. My daughter wept: 'Now you've really fixed it so I can't graduate. I can't go to school or church any more; I can't get another boyfriend. I wish I could die.' She slammed her bedroom door.

The rest of the letter says that, since this event, his wife and daughter eat breakfast before he does so that they won't have to say good morning. Worse, they clipped a column I wrote about my daughters and left it beside his orange juice. This man, who lives in Texas, says that if I'm so damn great to please tell him what to do.

I don't write a lovelorn column. Mine consists of generalized nonsense. In addition, as a father, I have made all the mistakes and invented a few. However, it doesn't require widsom to know that this particular daddy is wrong.

Admit it — nobody is good enough for your daughter even if the crumb is bald. She's your precious personal property and anyone who threatens to break that up is, as you say, a "punk."

She's 18. She has a degree of maturity. She lives in a culture where girls show everything and boys show nothing except noses. Either she embraces that culture, or she becomes friendless — a weirdo.

Daughters usually start out by dating the first orangutan who asks, because females are insecure. It doesn't matter what he looks like. Let her go. And make sure she is never quite ready when he calls, so that you have a chance to chat with him.

When another charmer asks for a date, she'll dump the first one. There will be a third. And a fourth. Remember your own dates? Or is it too far back to recall how you bounced from one girl to another?

All of us do it. The rare pair meets in elementary school and some day marries. Treat each boy with the same smiling spurious respect he accords to you. Let your wife worry about the difference between what girls promise and what they deliver. She'll divine it all — even when your daughter is lying.

If, next year, the youth culture turns to very long dresses for girls and shaven skulls for boys, you will still complain. In this house, we always meet the boy and give him a friendly hand. Some look like Mary Pickford in sneakers. But I know my place and my girls know theirs. I always make certain that I know where they are going, allow them a reasonable time to get home, and I know his name and his father's phone number.

So, chin up, my friend. It may be difficult for you to apologize. Maybe it sticks in your throat. If so, when you see this column, buy three copies of the paper. Clip the column, write, "Okay. Let's try again," and lay one on your daughter's bed and one on your wife's. Save the third for junior. When he shows up, paste it on his beard upside down so he can read it.

Goodnight Dear Abby, wherever you are.

War tag haggle drags on

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. and North Vietnamese officials met for the 10th time Tuesday to determine the amount of reparations Washington should pay Hanoi to repair the ravages of war.

The two sides bargained for two hours Monday in the first meeting since Washington broke off the negotiations two months ago.

"We haven't come to any details," chief U.S. delegate Maurice Williams said after the meeting.

"I am continuing my discussions with (Hanoi's Finance Minister) Dang Viet Chau. This is the 10th meeting of the Joint Economic Commission," he said.

Before the session began, Chau was questioned about possibilities of success.

"It is difficult to predict and it is presumptuous," he said. "We want to see what the attitude of the other side is. We are still in the discussing stage."

Stamp inflating agreement close

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Union and U.S. Postal Service negotiators were reported near agreement Tuesday on a new contract that Postmaster General E.T. Klassen has already said probably will mean raising the postage for a first class letter to 10 cents.

But settlement on a new contract well in advance of the July 20 expiration of the old pact would head off a summer postal strike that could disrupt mail deliveries such as the 1970 walkout by thousands of postal workers at scattered points across the nation.

President James H. Rademacher of the Letter Carriers Union told his members in a taped telephone message that negotiators for the Postal Service and for unions representing some 500,000 workers had tentatively settled on wages and on 45 of 53 union demands. But he said agreement had not been reached on several other major issues.

"Hopefully Tuesday afternoon we can report a tentative agreement," Rademacher said. President Francis S. Filbey of the American Postal Workers Union also reported the bargainers near agreement.

But senior assistant Postmaster General Darrell F. Brown Jr., the chief management negotiator, said such statements were "premature" since the contract talks still could snag over the unresolved issues.

Filbey indicated the wage settlement was higher than the 5.5 per cent government standard, and that the postal workers also would get a cost of living adjustment above that.

Klassen, in an interview published in U.S. News & World Report, said he probably would ask the Postal Rate Commission in September to increase first class letter postage from the present 8 cents up to 10 cents.

Klassen said the additional two cents would bring in about $1 billion a year to help pay for past wage increases for postal workers and the new contract.

Two key disputes that could snag the talks were the unions' demand for deletion of a ban on strikes, and management's insistence on deleting a ban on layoffs to reduce the size of the Postal Service work force. Presently, it must reduce its work force through attrition.

Doctor defends Polk director

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Dr. Albert Roode, physician and clinical director of Polk State School and Hospital in Venango County, Tuesday defended the use of wooden cages and other restraining devices on patients.

Roode, first defense witness at a Civil Service Commission hearing for former Polk Supt. Dr. James H. McClelland, also accused the Pennsylvania Welfare Department of being "cruel and dehumanizing" in maintaining overcrowded conditions "which it has known about for years."

McClelland is appealing his firing by state Welfare Secretary Helene Wohlgemuth.

Roode testified after the three - member commission refused for a second time a motion by McClelland's attorney to dismiss the proceedings.

McClelland, 58, a staff member of the 2,800-patient Polk institution for 34 years, the past 15 of them as superintendent, was dismissed last April.

Major seaport highway taken by Cambodians

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Two large groups of Cambodian troops linked up on Highway 4 Tuesday at a point about 16 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, regaining control of that part of the road leading to the country's only seaport for the first time in two weeks.

Field reports said there was no rebel resistance aside from one clash south of the road in which eight Cambodian soldiers were reported killed.

Wire tap dismissal denied

KING OF PRUSSIA, Pa. (UPI) — A Montgomery County district justice on Tuesday turned down a defense motion for dismissal of illegal wire-tapping charges against former state police Commissioner Rocco P. Urella and four other men.

District Justice George W. Zeigler Jr. dismissed the motion by attorney A. Charles Peruto after the lawyer charged that pre-trial publicity "makes it impossible" for the men to get a fair trial.

The preliminary hearing stemmed from charges Urella and six others, five of them former state troopers, were involved in tapping the phones of fellow state police last November and a subsequent conspiracy to cover up the alleged wrong-doing.

Urella, who was fired by Gov. Milton J. Shapp late last year, was charged with wire-tapping, installation of wire-tapping devices, unlawful entry and two counts of conspiracy after wire-tap equipment was discovered in a room at the George Washington Motor Lodge here.

The taps were allegedly made on state troopers who were using the motel as headquarters for a State Crime Commission probe into suspected police corruption in nearby Philadelphia. Charges identical to Urella's were lodged against three members of Urella's private security force—former Lt. Stephen Luchansky and former Cpls. Curtis Guyette and Metro Kardash.

Loose con threatens children

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — An escaped convict Tuesday burst into a small apartment on the city's west side and held a babysitter and five children hostage at knife point.

Jessie Wiggins was babysitting the five young children when the man entered her apartment with the knife drawn at 11 a.m., police said.

They said Charles Whitted, 23, who escaped Friday night from the Grasslands Prison Hospital five miles away in Valhalla, was holding a knife at the throat of one of the children.

Whitted, who was serving a one-year term for illegal posession of a gun, did not make any demands, police said, and he released the youngest hostage, a 9-month-old infant.

At knifepoint Whitted forced a cabdriver in Danbury, Conn., to drive him to the two story row of apartments. Police said they did not know if the convict knew Mrs. Wiggins.

About 25 police officers surrounded the apartment building and pleaded with Whitted to release all the hostages.

Watergate witnesses dispute CIA link

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former presidential counsel Charles Colson Tuesday disputed testimony by former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman as to how the CIA was drawn into the Watergate case and related incidents.

Colson told the Senate Appropriations' Investigations Subcommittee he informed Ehrlichman that E. Howard Hunt, one of those assigned to investigate leaks of government information, wanted clearance from the CIA.

Ehrlichman in earlier testimony said he never knew about Hunt's involvement in advance, and learned about it only when CIA officials called to see if Hunt should continue to get cooperation from the agency.

Hunt, one of the convicted Watergate burglars, obtained equipment from the CIA, including disguises, which were used in the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrists office and other incidents.

Colson maintained that Hunt was on a legitimate White House assignment when he first made contact with the CIA. Colson hired Hunt to investigate the leaking of the Pentagon Papers, which Ellsberg released to the press.

Colson and Ehrlichman, who appeared before the committee last month, both said they did not make the call to the CIA which gave Hunt clearance.

Salads from weeds?

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Down where the trolley tracks are torn up and the tall weeds bury their burrs in your socks, you'll find botanist Charlotte Clarke, who finds living off the land exciting, inexpensive and a great way to keep in tune with nature.

A gourmet cook, she knows how to appreciate some of the common but tasty weeds that grow abundantly in the dusty, vacant lots around her home.

But, as she points out, one doesn't have to be a gourmet cook to hunt for wild artichokes and wild radishes, nor to appreciate delicate mustard stems or the juicy licorice taste of anise root stems.

And one sip of homemade dandelion or elderberry wine does more to promote natural foods than all the lectures and library books.

The Orange Coast College instructor, an avid Sierra backpacker with her husband, took a short stroll recently through some thorny back lots to prove how supermarket habits had blinded housewives to some of nature's little known specials.

Many of her dinner specialties, such as tasty acorn bread, come from closely studying California Indian lore. The attractive young botanist began her stroll through a wide, weedy lot where once the city trolley ran, and smiled as she approached a clump of bright green, ordinary looking stems.

"This is what I call cheese weed," she said, scooping her hand down into the bush and pulling up a fistful of tiny pods, tossing them into her mouth like peanuts.

"You see? They look like cheeses and my students and I just love them. They're great for natural snacks or in salads," Mrs. Clarke said.

Picking her way through a big patch of wild alfalfa and barley, snagging their burrs in her shoes, Mrs. Clarke explained that the wild oats were cousins to wheat and perfect for grinding up into flour.

She grinds them up in her blender, throws in a few capfuls of wild cattail flour and bakes delicious, dark sweet breads.

Later, she hopped in her car for a short drive to a vacant lot by Pacific Coast Highway.

"This is my 'supermarket lot'," she grinned, collecting wild artichokes, baby tomatoes and tender wild beet leaves.

Mrs. Clark, who got her master's in botany at UCLA and now teaches part time at two community colleges, is gathering notes and recipes for a forthcoming "weed cookbook."

"Foraging for food gets people curious all the time, and occasionally they stop and ask what I'm doing.

"When I tell them—wow—they're all eyes and ears and suddenly they want to know all there is about wild, edible plants. I like that. Women especially get turned on when they see how much food money they can save," she says.

She recalled one woman who was about to have her big vacant lot bulldozed clear of its wild barley patch.

"When I asked if I could pick some of it," said Mrs. Clarke, "The woman said, 'Oh my goodness, what on earth for?' When I told her I could make cereal and bread from the barley kernels, the woman just laughed and said, "Take what you want, this lot is just such a mess."

"Can you imagine?" chuckled Mrs. Clarke, "Here was all this free food and she just thought it was a 'mess.' "

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

"That is known as the children's hour" — is a phrase that comes to my mind this time of year. All of a sudden there are children everywhere, on the streets, in the stores, lining up for ice cream cones, dodging around adults like so many trees.

As the summer wears on, they seemed to get absorbed into the landscape but right now they are so very evident that it seems as if the average age has dropped a few decades.

Where do they go when they vanish? Well, Daily Vacation Bible Schools used to ease the transition from a structured school life to summer freedom and I guess they still do although not so insistently.

Then there are the day camps: Girl Scout, Salvation Army, YMCA, hauling them off by the busloads for the day out of doors. And then, of course, there are the playgrounds with their varied programs to interest the youngsters.

What has really shocked me has been the stories about vandalism and malicious mischief in the Stroudsburg playground, which used to be the pride of the town — a place you took city visitors to show them the advantages of small towns as a place to raise children.

It's hard to put a finger on what has changed: the location is just as picturesque, the equipment is more modern, the staff seems as dedicated. The children who frequent it have been exposed as no other generation to anti-littering, save our environment, and similar propaganda campaigns.

So why does it look sort of shabby and second-class? Is it because the Sunday school and family picnics have withdrawn to more private spots. That private swimming pools and swim clubs have brought about a sort of de facto segregation?

It's not a change for the better. But there are other changes which offer sports training in many fields. It used to be that there was Little League baseball and that was about it.

Now even the college is getting into the field of specialized sports with their summer sports program for boys and girls from 7 to 14, offering training in swimming, gymnastics and tennis four mornings a week under college calibre coaches.

It's still a wonderful place to raise children, but it still needs parents who know what the opportunities are and encourage their children to make use of them.

Miss Linda L. Pipher weds Lester Bonawitz

TANNERSVILLE — Miss Linda L. Pipher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart F. Pipher of Star Route, Tannersville, became the bride of Lester P. Bonawitz on Sunday, June 10 at 2 p.m. in the United Methodist Church, Reeders.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Charles Mitchel and the late Harry Bonawitz of Gardners.

Rev. Alan Taylor performed the double ring ceremony before the altar decorated with bouquets of white snapdragons and lavendar tipped carnations. The pews were marked with white satin bows. Avon Doll Jr. was organist and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Snyder sang "Because" "Hawaiian Wedding Song" and "Each for the Other" before the ceremony, and "The Lord's Prayer" during it.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess-style gown of textured polyester knit with long shirred sleeves accented with knit cuffs made by her grandmother, Mrs. Elmer Woodling. She wore a mantilla of illusion with lace edging.

She carried a bouquet of hanging ivy with small white roses and babies breath with an orchid center.

Her sister, Miss Yvonne E. Pipher, was her maid of honor. She wore a gown of the same style in lavendar and a handmade picture hat with lavendar ribbon and laced and carried a basket of white daisies and carnations tipped in lavendar with matching lavendar ribbon.

Melvin Chandler of Gardners was best man. Ushers were Douglas Giffels of Stroudsburg, cousin of the bride, and Dave Reckner of Gardners, cousin of the bridegroom.

The men wore black suits with ruffled lavendar shirts and black satin bow ties.

The bride's mother wore a floor length gown of lavendar flowered polyester crepe with ribbed v-neck and midriff and matching accessories. Her corsage was a lavendar orchid. Better browning

Basic lesson

By BARBARA GIBBONS

How do you "brown" meats and vegetables?

Depending on whose recipe you follow, you may be adding anywhere from 200 to 1,000 unneeded extra calories to a dish that might otherwise be slimming, yet is just as satisfying.

Beef Stew, Sauteed Chicken, Fried Liver and Onions, Mushrooms in Wine, Chili, Veal Scallopini, Fried Eggplant . . . these are just a few of the hundreds of recipes that first call for the basic step of "browning" — frying in fat just long enough to provide a nicely browned exterior.

Since fat is the most fattening thing there is — twice the calories of anything else — it's interesting to note how different cooks and cookbooks approach the same recipe.

Beef Stew, for example. Cooking author James Beard uses five tablespoons of fat (500 calories) for his American Beef Stew. Craig Claiborne's recipe is somewhat slimmer: two tablespoons (200 calories). But the best-selling cookbook, "The Joy of Cooking," advises browning beef in a half-pound of salt pork (1,705 calories!).

All their recipes use the same quantity of meat: two pounds of beef cubes. None mentions anything about draining the fat or skimming before serving. Also, Mr. Beard advises thickening the stew with an unspecified quantity of "pea-sized balls of flour and butter kneaded together."

Of course, many cooks are even more heavy-handed, simply upending the oil bottle into the frying pan or spooning out great gobs of grease . . . as their mothers and grandmothers did, before them. It's understandable, however, since "frying," "sauteeing" and "browning" are the first cooking steps one learns, and forever after it's automatic.

No fat added

However, you can brown most meats with no fat added! Most cuts have ample fat of their own. Beef-stew meat may contain as much as one-third fat. By browning the meat in its own fat, you subtract calories rather than add them. Here's how:

First, you must — simply must — have a nonstick skillet.

Now, instead of searing the meat in huge quantities of boiling fat, put the meat in a cold skillet. Then heat it very slowly over a moderate flame. No rush! Give the meat time enough to release its own inner fat for browning.

With very lean meat, add a tablespoon or two of liquid (broth, soy sauce, wine, water or whatever). At first the meat will seam to "steam," but then the liquid evaporates and meat will brown in its own residue of melted fat.

For chicken, poultry and meats with skin, place the pieces skin side down in a cold skillet. Let the skillet warm slowly, and the pieces will brown in the fat that melts from under the skin.

Really fatty meats — frankfurters, sausages, bacon, etc. — have more fat than they need. Puncture with a fork and brown very well, to get rid of as much pound-provoking fat as possible. Blot the meat with a paper towel.

Liver, scallops, shrimp, and other virtually fat-free foods vegetables, can be browned in as little as half-tablespoon of fat or oil. To help spread the fat around, combine the fat with one tablespoon of water or liquid (or use one tablespoon of diet margarine; it's only half fat!). Turn the food frequently over moderate heat. Once the moisture evaporates, the food will brown quickly.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Watergate tale-teller James McCord's pact with a N.Y. publisher for a book about his career (ironically signed in the Watergate Hotel) was cancelled. He'll keep the agreed-on-money; it's noted the pub-firm has big cable-TV holdings and isn't seeking gov't "difficulties" . . . Paula Prentiss learned how temperamental French chefs are: she went into a kitchen in the south of France, and the monsoor in the white hat broke a raw egg on her noggin . . . Las Vegas comics are getting too dirty even for the cynical Greed City boss gamblers: because guests are horrified at and hollering about the filthy material; explaining why Perry Como gets $125,000 a week and Buddy Hackett doesn't.

All those charity telethons and now a Cafethon: League in Aid of Crippled Children gets all proceeds from 30 hours of continuous entertainment July 22 and 23 at the Catch a Rising Star spot . . . Faye Dunaway quit being a groupie for much-younger Peter Wolf of the J. Geils Band.

David Birney and Meredith Baxter of the just closed (CBS bowed to the pressure) "Bridget & Bernie" high-rated doldrum are practicing sining and dancing like crazee: for a summer tour in Guys & Dolls" . . . Can't understand the CBS brasslids: they keep hollering about "credibility gaps" everywhere but don't even twinge when they insist the Bridget-Bernie series wasn't shuttered because of minority pressure; it was; no TV network in the history of the rare medium ever collapsed a series that Nielsen rated 7th over the full season; next, they'll claim Nielsen doesn't run the schedule.

New jazz project, Festival on the River, starts jazz cruises aboard a chartered Staten Island ferry sailing N.Y. Harbor and the Hudson River featuring top musicians and entertainers; dates and performers to be announced shortly; maybe by overboard-bottle? . . . Milton Berle's been sitting up nights figuring how to get back on TV; a coffee commercial is on his bedside burner.

Robert Morley never leaves us via his TV BOAC commercials but since last fall he's been stage-starring in Australia in "How the Other Half Loves"; just back in time to celebrate his 65th birthday . . . We swear he looked 65 about 25 years ago; and now he doesn't.

Sir Terrence Rattigan, who wrote "The Nelson Affair" in which Glenda Jackson played Lady Hamilton and who now goes on TV knocking it, decries Glenda's drab taste, adding, "She has not, so far as I know, returned her cheque."

Women's Lib gets another fist in the door: Harrah's Tahoe hired the first female security guard in Nevada gaming history . . . Joan Cohn (ex-Mrs. Larry) Harvey and Moss Mabry aren't gathering moss . . . Motown Records will explode a "black Rod McKuen," poet-singer John Kasandra . . . "New" books due shortly: "The Venetians," "Serpent in Eden," "Prince's Mask" and "My Only Love, My Only Hate": they're just novelized switches on Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "Hamlet," and "Romeo & Juliet." Commissioned by Publishers-Universal-Tandem.

Burt Reynolds' centerfold-cum-Sarah Miles-scandal-cum Dinah made him so famous, his old flicks are being revived — with Burt getting top billing . . . Sponsors now are fed up network shows battering the reputations of the cops . . . Watched "Half a Sixpence" and wondered what's happened to its stage-screen star Tommy Steele; must've disappeared in the rock-culture because he has real talent.

THE LOCKHORNS

"GET INVOLVED IN THE ECOLOGY MOVEMENT? I CAN'T EVEN GET LEROY TO TAKE OUT THE GARBAGE."

Ann Landers

Wife's displaced

Dear Ann Landers: I cried over this problem until my eyes looked like two prunes. Please help me.

I had a fairly good marriage until our adopted daughter was five years old. I knew then that she had taken over my husband and I was out of the picture. I told my husband how I felt but he laughed and said I was imagining things.

When she was ten she announced she was going to marry a man just like Daddy. From that time on my life has been an unbearable hell. I can't trust the two of them in the same room alone. At the dinner table she takes off her shoes and runs her feet up and down her father's pants leg. When they watch TV together they hold hands. I give her all the money she needs but he slips her more.

I could write a book about what these two have done to me but I think you have the picture. I offered to go with my husband to a marriage counselor but he refuses. Tell me what to do before I murder these two snakes.

Displaced

Dear D.: I suggest professional help immediately. The overtones of serious psychological problems are apparent even at this distance. Get going.

Dear Ann Landers: Six months ago three of my husband's business associates were involved in a financial mess. There were overtones of graft, bribery, extortion, income tax evasion, everything that goes into a very smelly court case. My husband's picture appeared in the paper, along with the rest.

Although he was completely vindicated of all charges, people still remember it and it's maddening that they don't have the facts straight. Two of the women I play cards with bring up the incident regularly and I find it very upsetting.

Will you please supply me with some sample sentences to shut them up? Thank you.

Still Guilty By Association

Dear S.G.: You don't need sample sentences. You need new friends. People who dig up old bones of this kind are not well-intentioned. Call a spade a spade and throw in the deck with these dollies.

Confidential to Had It: A 16-year-old girl who quits school and gets married to escape from an unhappy home will nearly always discover that the home she makes will be no happier than the one she left. Hang in there and graduate from high school. It's the best thing you can do with the next year of your life.

Erma Bombeck

Aspirin headache

I don't know who invented headaches. . .probably the Russians. . .but aspirin manufacturers sure did a job on Americans.

Now that they are under investigation for false claims, I have to admit I never had a headache until about 15 years ago. I was always one of those low-key, relaxed people who sleep in a dentist's chair and call IRS men by their first names.

Then one afternoon I was watching a commercial. It showed an aspirin racing brand X to the blood stream. I sat around all afternoon worrying about who was winning the race in my stomach until my head nearly split open.

Soon after that, I saw my first "glass stomach." I had never seen a glass stomach before and frankly developed quite a hang-up. After that, I refused to get caught in New Year's Eve crowds, dive into the pool, or belly up to the bar.

A simple case of anger that used to work out hostilities now became a job for a couple of aspirin tablets.

When a meddling mother tried to help you cook you could no longer say, "Will you knock it off, Mom. I'd rather do it myself. Go alphabetize your Social Security checks." You took two aspirin and abdicated.

When you couldn't perform a simple task (like killing a gnat in your bra) because of arthritis, you were never supposed to resort to a four-letter word and kick the cat, but take two aspirin and smile again.

And when you walked into your daughter's bedroom which looked like a recycling station you were never supposed to shout at your child, "Don't just sit there. Get a rake!" but take two aspirin and turn up the stereo.

As the years went on, I became more tense and more up tight than ever. They began holding aspirin seminars on television and didn't even invite me. I tried several times to find out where they were meeting as I had a question. I wanted to ask them about a home ec. teacher of mine who used to drop two aspirin in her Coke just to get through her 4th period.

I began getting headaches over little things . . . like trading my present brand for an upset stomach . . . like seeing the man in the white coat telling me how to treat flu when it struck and later seeing him as a crook on "Love of Life" . . . and feeling stupid when my husband asked me how I felt each evening and making the sign of V and humming the theme from "Victory at Sea."

All that may soon be over now. The question is, did we imagine the cure? Or the headaches? Whatever, I imagine aspirin manufacturers are having some king-size headaches these days. I wonder what they're taking for it?

Teen Forum

Favorite sister

By Jean Adams

UNFAIR? (Q.) I am the oldest of my sisters. It's getting to bother me that the next oldest is always being looked upon by my parents as different. When we have a fight my parents always yell at me, even if she starts it.

She seems to get away with just about anything. She bosses me around and when I answer her back I get yelled at. They never even listen to my side of the story any more.

When I try to watch TV in Mon's room with her she kicks me out. But my sister spent the whole day with Mom yesterday. Whenever Dad spots something interesting he calls my sister, never me.

She most of the time talks back to my parents and all they do is say they're going to punish her, but they don't. But as soon as I open my mouth I am punished. She throws tantrums and kicks and cries till she gets her own way.

It always works, but if I just ask why, I am in trouble. I usually end up with a bloody lip, never my sister. When I try talking to them I usually get nowhere. Could you please tell me or help me get an understanding with my parents so everything will be OK again. I think they love my sister better than me.

—Mistreated in Conn.

(A.) Year after year I get letters such as yours. I am definitely against favoritism by parents to one child at the expense of others.

I am definitely against brutality by parents.

I am definitely against judgments by parents that one child is "good" and one is "bad" and that the treatment of the two children shall be based on that judgment.

But I wonder if you, and other teen-agers like you, could not improve your lot by a few simple steps:

(1.) Recognize that you and your sisters ARE different, and that is one of the big reasons why your parents treat you and her differently. Methods that work with her may not work with you, and vice versa.

(2.) And this is very important: Ask yourself if you show your parents that you love them.

(3.) If your answer is no, try giving them a little love. I believe the results will be so striking that you will soon be giving them a lot of love.

(4.) When you talk with them, talk lovingly instead of combatively.

If you will follow these four simple steps, you will be on the road to understanding with your parents. Start now.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 6-20

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

GEMINI

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Curb a tendency to scatter your forces. Don't try to do too many things at one time or try to be in too many places at once. It can't be done!

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — You may feel unusually ambitious now, but DO realize your limitations. If you don't, you may overshoot your mark — with resultant disappointment.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — A cherished dream may seem almost impossible of realization, but don't lose faith. An almost "miraculous" bit of luck could turn the tide in your favor.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Be sure that your motives and meanings are clear to others. Don't take for granted that those close to you will automatically understand.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — A better day for completing old projects than for beginning new ones. Make plans for the latter but don't launch for 24 hours.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — A good day. Certain recent pressures should be lifting and some cherished desires can be realized. You have good friends in your corner.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Your magnetism should be working overtime now so take the initiative in advancing both career and personal goals. What you ask will be given.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — There could be some conflict within the family circle. If not involved, stay out. If you are, don't blow a minor dispute out of proportion.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Jupiter highly beneficient. You make solid progress now in both business and financial affairs. Organizational efforts also favored.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Don't let your impulses dominate logic — especially in situations where finances are involved. Recklessness with money now could prove disastrous later.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Lots of action indicated in areas that have been quiet for some time. Get in there while the time is ripe — and profit!

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Be willing to give the spotlight to others now. By taking a back seat temporarily you can eventually accelerate YOUR move forward.

YOU BORN TODAY have an agile mind and are extremely dexterous with your hands as well. You are more serious in your outlook on life than many other Geminians and could make an outstanding success in the business world or in the scientific field. But you also have a creative side, which would probably best express itself in literature of the profound type.

Opening lead - jack of clubs.

In some hands, the outcome is virtually a foregone conclusion the moment dummy appears. Declarer loses exactly the number of tricks he must lose, neither more nor less, and the play period is merely a formality.

In other hands the outcome is less certain and depends on how the adverse cards are divided. Suit-breaks and finesses, rather than skill, determine the result of such hands.

But a third category of hands consists of those where declarer, by exercising a form of magic, can overcome an unlucky lie of the unseen cards.

Consider this deal where West leads a club and declarer sees he may lose a heart and three diamonds if he is unlucky. As three diamond tricks can be lost only if East has the A-Q over the K-J, South organizes a plan to overcome that condition if it exists.

He wins the club lead with the king, draws two rounds of trumps, cashes the ace of clubs, ruffs a club, cashes the A-K of hearts and exits with a heart. As a result of this series of plays, South achieves an impregnable position—no matter how the cards lie.

In the actual case, West wins the heart and returns a diamond—let's say the nine. Declarer covers with the jack, which loses to the queen. East must now return a diamond or yield a ruff and discard. Either way, South comes home free.

The hand is a typical example of one of declarer's most valuable stand-bys—the elimination play. Declarer clears suits one and two (trumps and clubs, in this case), and puts the enemy on lead with suit three (hearts) in order to solve the problem of dealing effectively with suit four (diamonds).

LANTERMAN

Republicans form party alliance

BLAKESLEE—A new Pennsylvania political force has emerged with the formation of the Northeast-Central Republican Alliance (NECRA) at a meeting held here at the Spotsman's Club.

Alliance members are chairmen of Republican organizations representing 10 Northeast and central Pennsylvania counties.

According to Michael Kitsock, (Schuylkill) who was elected chairman at the meeting, the alliance is "designed to provide an effective, workable vehicle for applying united, concerted action in the consideration and resolution of all political matters affecting its membership."

Main speaker at the organizational meeting was state Sen. Frederick Hobbs, Pottsville, who represents the counties of Schuylkill, Carbon and a portion of Monroe.

Specifically, the organization will have four functions, according to President Kitsock.

—"To support and implement, through the encouragement of collective action on the part of its respective representation in the General Assembly, all such public plans or legislative proposals designed to foster or enhance the economic, cultural, and social well-being of member counties.

—"To actively seek out and encourage the participation in the political process of such qualified, reputable and responsible prospective Republican candidates for office — at county, state and national levels — as appear to meet the strict standards of today's discerning electorate and merit its support. And to bring all such persons so adjudged to the attention of the state chairman and state committee.

—"To recommend such Republicans who are qualified and deserving of appointment to high appointive state positions as they become available.

Judge declares mistrial

MORRISTOWN, N.J. — A murder trial against two men — one a former East Stroudsburg resident — has been ruled a mistrial in Morris County.

Morris County Judge John D. Collins declared a mistrial when one of the defendants called a witness a liar in the courtroom Monday.

Collins said the defendants will be tried again in September. They are Samuel Corsaro, of Belleville, N.J., formerly of East Stroudsburg, and Aurelio Cagno Jr. of Livingston, N.J.

The prosecution's key witness, Frank Miele, was starting to describe his friendship with the accused when Cagno, jumping to his feet, shouted, "You filthy liar. You don't know me, you filthy liar. Will you take a polygraph like I have, you filthy liar? You ruined my life."

Miele was to have testified he aided the defendants in getting rid of the gun used in the killing of Genardo Ladalardo Jr. inside the victim's Morris Township liquor store in 1969.

Fund drive meeting scheduled

EAST STROUDSBURG — The final community appeal report meeting of the Expansion '73 campaign for The General Hospital of Monroe County is set for 8:00 p.m. today in the hospital cafeteria.

Team captains,in-plant campaign leaders and all volunteer campaigners with unfinished assignments are urged to bring their reports to this meeting, or to campaign headquarters at the hospital during the day.

With a minimum goal of $100,000, the community appeal division of the campaign reached $99,176 last week, and a substantial oversubscription is certain. But Charles E. Swishers, Jr., administrator of the General Hospital, pointed out that every dollar that can be raised is urgently needed.

"We're delighted at the response to the hospital's appeal and at the efforts of our campaign workers," Swisher said.

"But the fact that our minimum goal will be exceeded is no reason to let up in these efforts. Hundreds of prospects have not yet been seen, and every extra dollar raised reduces our borrowing requirements by a like amount."

Gas explosion leaves Kunkletown man dead

KUNKLETOWN — Prominent Lutheran layman John E. Yoe, 51, died of a heart attack Tuesday following an early morning gas explosion at his home near Kingswood Lake between Kunkletown and Kresgeville.

Yoe was pronounced dead on arrival at Palmerton Hospital.

Carbon County Coroner Robert Deibert listed the cause of death as a "coronary insufficiency" probably caused by the excitement of the explosion.

He said Yoe had a heart condition.

The explosion in Yoe's home happened at 4:45 a.m., according to Trooper John Pampanin of the state police at Lehighton.

He said the blast came from a gas stove in a 15-foot sun deck at the rear of the house. Pampanin said several burned matches and a box partially full of unburned matches were found near the gas range.

He said the oven knob was turned to the "on" position, but speculated it may have been jarred by the explosion.

Yoe's 26-year-old daughter Paula, who was in Philadelphia at the time of the tragedy, said the range came with the house when it was bought three years ago.

She said the family never used the stove.

Another daughter, Star, was also in Philadelphia at the time of the mishap.

The two daughters didn't learn of their father's death until they arrived later.

Yoe was the first layman to serve as assistant to the president of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Synod of the Lutheran Church of America.

He had been a member of the Synod staff for two years. Prior, he was a member of the Commission of Stewardship for the Lutheran Church.

Yoe was an engineer for 20 years with the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co., and also served as secretary of the Eldred Township Planning Commission for three years.

The summer kitchen, an enclosed porch and a green house all were blasted away by the explosion, according to daughter, Paula.

"Everything was a complete mess," she said. "The windows were all blown out and the grass was just covered with glass."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Semmel, neighbors went to assist Yoe immediately after they heard the blast.

"It was like we were lifted right out of bed when the explosion occurred," they described.

"John was fine then," said Semmel. "He moved his car to let the Kunkletown fire truck get close to the house. When he came around the house, he fell to the ground."

Yoe and his wife Emma were sleeping in an upstairs bedroom. After the blast he dressed and called the fire company.

Pyrofax Gas Co. officials from Palmerton and state fire marshall John Dicaki of Hazelton sifted through the debris with local firemen and state troopers from Lehighton.

"We can't find anything wrong with the stove," said Wesley Christman, Kunkletown fire chief.

He said most of the rooms downstairs were damaged by the blast.

Eighteen-inch thick stone walls weren't damaged but silver plates bent in half a short distance away. evidenced the power of shock waves set off by the explosion.

Pending funeral arrangements for Yoe will be announced by the Kresge Funeral Home, Brodheadsville.

Rapist assails three women

STROUDSBURG — A rapist has attacked three women in the Stroudsburg-Stroud Township area.

A 74-year-old woman was attacked in her home in the Scott and Seventh Street area on Tuesday, June 12, Stroudsburg Police Chief John Baujan confirmed Tuesday.

Baujan said the other attacks occurred in Stroud Township.

Stroud Township Police Chief Charles Martin would not confirm or deny the report.

He said, however, "to give any information out now would hinder any investigation we would be conducting."

Baujan said the elderly woman was in her home when someone entered, sexually assaulted her and then fled.

She could give no description of the rapist.

While Baujan said there "were no concrete suspects," several persons are being checked out.

Stroud Township Police Sgt. James W. Carey said late Tuesday his investigation of a woman screaming for help near a lake in the Ehler Street area had turned up no leads.

Court challenge looming for Smithfield zoning law

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Smithfield Township's fledgling zoning ordinance will face its first court test soon.

An appeal was filed in Monroe County Court of Common Pleas Tuesday to have the ordinance declared invalid.

The legal appeal, made in behalf of Pococabana Lodge Inc. by Anthony Roberti, a Jim Thorpe attorney, contends the ordinance was improperly enacted.

The Pococabana, a resort located on both sides of Route 209 near Minisink Hills, is owned by Buchwald Enterprises of Miami, Fla.

Herbert Buchwald, company president, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

"We are really quite serious about this appeal," Roberti said.

"The suit is alleging the township has been unreasonable in what was done.

"Take for example, on one side of the road, Pococabana is zoned R-1. On the other side, the business is zoned R-2. The land is cut in two with that kind of zoning designation.

"Besides, it is a commercial area which is now a non-conforming use in the two zones.

"That really limits the owners from buying and developing the land because a non-conforming use can only be expanded by 33.3 per cent within the township," Roberti said.

He said many establishments along Route 209 within the township are now non-conforming uses because much land area adjacent to the road is zoned residential.

"The commercially zoned area along the road is too hilly for development," Roberti charged.

The actual filed writ said the meetings where the proposed ordinance was presented publicly were improperly run; the required notices were improper and other improprieties, not known to the appellant, occurred.

Roberti also questioned definitions of the zone areas.

"There are certain commercial establishments outlawed in the commercially designated zone," Roberti said.

"I just don't understand that. Usually, commercial operations allowed in an R-2 zone are allowed in a commercial zone.

"Plus in the Smithfield ordinance, overlapping uses are prohibited."

Roberti said the suit in behalf of the partially burnt out resort was filed because the 30 day deadline for appeals was fast approaching. Beyond the deadline, appeals of this sort cannot be made, he said.

Borough to retain Normal St. meters

EAST STROUDSBURG — Nickels and dimes will continue trickling to East Stroudsburg's borough coffers from about a dozen parking meters on Normal Street.

Borough Council voted Tuesday night to keep the meters in operation along the street, agreeing with a street committee's recommendation.

"I cannot see moving meters away from that area," Councilman John Barnes contended.

"By having meters in the area, we at least keep the parkers moving and control long-term parking. Once we begin removing parking meters from the streets, we will lose control of the parking situation.

"In a way, I wish we could put meters on all borough streets sometimes. Then we would control the parking more," Barnes said.

Councilman Charles Merring was opposed. "They don't serve any logical purpose," he argued.

Council also agreed to install meters on Washington Street next to the Salvation Army.

A motion was passed unanimously honoring Salvation Army Majors Rex and Kay Worthy for their service to the East Stroudsburg community. They are being transferred to Williamsport June 27.

Low bids on road surfacing materials were also approved early in the meeting. The bids had been opened June 5.

William Hopkins, from Hess Associates gave a report on the water filtration plant. Hopkins recommended council buy an additional chemical feed system to improve water quality. It would cost less than $1,500, he said.

Planners employ two consulting firms

STROUDSBURG — A select committee of the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night voted to hire separate consulting firms to draw up a comprehensive land use plan and plan to implement open space tax shelters.

Planners split 3-1 on a motion to recommend Richard S. Cowan and Associates of Quakertown as consultants for the overall comprehensive land use plan for the county.

Cowan was low bidder of three with a $35,600 price on the plan.

In another split decision, the Committee members decided to hire Cylinder and Brown of Bucks County to draw up a $6,000 plan for implementing Act 515 — Pennsylvania's Open Space Assessment Act.

The law allows qualifying property owners to sign an agreement with the county to maintain their land in "open space." In return, the landowner is given a tax break.

Cylinder and Brown was the firm recommended to the planners by Monroe County Commissioner William F. Quinn.

Appearing at the special meeting, Quinn told the planners the commissioners met with Cylinder and Brown Monday.

Quinn said the firm was responsible for implementing the open space program in Bucks County, the only Pennsylvania county to use the law.

He urged hiring Cylinder and Brown, saying the firm has experience in the field.

Quinn also said the implementation of an open space program in Monroe County can't wait for a comprehensive land use plan.

Another firm bidding on the combined project said an open space program should be "subordinate action" to an overall comprehensive plan.

Ronald Turner, vice-president of Albright and Friel of Philadelphia, appeared before the vote to present a proposal.

"We are not sure of the consequences of Act 515," Turner said. He said research by Albright and Friel revealed "nobody is sure" of the act's implications.

"Act 515 — to be of real value — has to be part of an overall land use plan," Turner said.

Quinn said the county wanted an open space plan by September — sooner than it would be possible to have a comprehensive land use sheme.

"My only concern is that it's almost July. In the next year there could be thousands and thousands of acres sold with Act 515," Quinn added.

Dairy building milking district

East-burg building costs rising

EAST STROUDSBURG — The renovation project at the former Lehigh Valley Dairy building, purchased by the East Stroudsburg Area School District for conversion to classroom use, is costing more each week.

The district board of school directors had difficulty getting contractors to bid on the renovation work in the first place, and when bids finally came in last week, they were substantially higher than anticipated.

Even if the board accepts low bidders only — which does not always happen because bids sometimes don't meet specifications — the overall project cost to the district would have jumped $111,000 to $447,300.

The April 24 overall estimate for the project was $458,756 with the district to pay $336,300 and the state to pay $122,400 in rated reimbursement funds.

The fact that bids from 10 contractors for general construction, electrical, plumbing and mechanical work came in $81,000 over the architect's estimates means the whole payment breakdown has to be re-evaluated.

The board must re-submit the estimates to the State Department of Community Affairs — a two to three-week process — before contracts can be awarded.

Architectural representative Gerald Busch of Everett Associates in Allentown said the board Monday night might be able to save $20,000 by throwing out plans for paving the parking lot, planting shrubery and lighting the building to protect school buses to be kept there at night.

Board members thought it would be easier to keep these items in the project and spread the $20,000 cost over five years with the same for the rest of the project, rather than throw it out and try to do it 10 or 15 years from now when costs might be even higher.

Busch did say the cost per pupil for the project is $1,615, which is low by state standards. He added that it would probably cost $200,000 to $300,000 more to tear down the dairy and build anew rather than renovate the existing building.

In Stofflet Street area

Renewal project on course

STROUDSBURG — Acquisition of properties in the Stofflet Street Urban Renewal Project is on schedule, according to Kenneth Alspach, executive director of the Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County.

He reported Tuesday six properties have been acquired with sales agreements signed for 16 more, accounting for 22 of the total 30 to be taken.

Alspach said replacement housing has been obtained in 13 cases where conditional agreements with former property owners have been executed.

"We're generally on schedule," Alspach said. "We originally wre going for 11 properties in the first action year, but on the accelerated schedule, we should have the first 20 by July 1 and the remaining 10 in the next few months."

He said a demolition contract will be let for bid as soon as five or six structures are vacant.

April 1, 1974 is the target date to have all properties in the seven acre area cleared. Four on Stofflet Street will be sold to a private developer and the remaining three acres is still slated for housing units for the elderly.

Alspach said developments on the federal level clouded the possibility of subsidized housing for the elderly, but the possiblity is open.

Vo-Tech grant

WASHINGTON — Federal funds of $168,000 in the form of an Appalachian Regional Commission grant have been approved for release to the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School in Bartonsville.

The money represents funds planned by the school's administration to help finance a $450,000 addition to the school.

Scotrun residents petition for highway safety signs

TANNERSVILLE — Sixty Scotrun residents have signed a petition asking Pocono Township supervisors for speed limit and "children at play" signs on Scotrun Avenue.

The petition was given to supervisors Tuesday by Fred and Marilyn Kresge from Scotrun. They said concern for safety on the street, always a problem, was raised again when a two-year-old was hit by a car on the road in May.

Supervisors not only agreed with the residents, but suggested that "no parking" signs also be posted on the road.

However, supervisors tabled action on the signs until they could consult the Scotrun Lutheran Church. Churchgoers have no adequate parking facilities and park along the road.

"We're not going to slap signs up without talking to anybody," Supervisor Horace Raish said.

Paul Frailey, township roadmaster, complained snow plows could not get through the road during the winter, nor could trailers get through in the summer because residents jam the road with parked cars.

Supervisors, in other action, voted to retain Penn East Corp. as consulting engineers for the township. Penn East receives $150 monthly for approximately eight hours of work, including attendance at one supervisors' meeting.

Supervisors and residents also complained that despite extensive spraying in the township, gypsy moths had defoliated sizeable portions of the woods.

Trucker escapes injury

DELAWARE, N.J. — A Greenville truck driver escaped serious injury early Tuesday when his rig went down a 70-foot embankment on Rte. 46.

State police at Blairstown, N.J. said Ronald H. Tanoury, 28, was driving east on Rte. 46 at 5:30 a.m. when he lost control.

Police said the truck went through 12 guard rails, and overturned before it went down the embankment.

Tanoury was taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County by the Belvidere Ambulance Corps. Police said he was treated and released.

Wrecking crews weren't able to pull the truck up until early today according to police. They said traffic on Rte. 46 was confined to one lane almost all Tuesday.

They said the truck was carrying a cargo of hanging meat. Federal inspectors were called because of the contents.

Traffic stopper

Ronald Roth, 37, Marshalls Creek, escaped injury Tuesday afternoon when the arm of a backhoe his truck was hauling struck an overpass at East Stroudsburg along the west bound lanes of Interstate 80. Acme Hose firemen from East Stroudsburg hosed fuel from the highway. Traffic was tied up for several miles.

Munson-Michael double to pace Yanks' 5-4 win

NEW YORK (UPI) — Back to back run-scoring doubles by Thurman Munson and Gene Michael capped a three-run fourth inning and sparked the New York Yankees to a 5-4 triumph Tuesday night over the Baltimore Orioles.

With the score tied 1-1, Graig Nettles walked with one out in the fourth and went to second on a groundout. Bernie Allen singled in Nettles and Munson and Michael followed with their doubles to put the Yankees ahead 4-1.

Nettles homered in the second for the first Yankee run and Michael singled home the winning run in the sixth inning.

Paul Blair singled in the first Oriole run in the fourth inning and Al Bumbry led off the fifth with a homer, which was followed by Rich Coggins' triple. Starting pitcher George Medich balked home Coggins. Fred Beene then came on and pitched 3 2-3 innings of two-hit relief ball to get the win.

When Blair doubled leading off the ninth, Sparky Lyle came on to get the save despite yielding a run-scoring single by pinch-hitter Don Baylor.

Phillies defeat Mets, 6-1; Lonborg, Schmidt heroes

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mike Schmidt hit his first major league grand slam Tuesday night to back the four-hit piching of Jim Lonborg and Mac Scarce and give the Philadelphia Phillies a 6-1 victory over the New York Mets.

Schmidt's home run, his fifth of the season and third in the last four games, came in the fourth inning and tagged Harry Parker, 5-1, with his first loss of the season.

Willie Montanez opened the inning with a walk and raced to third on a single by Greg Luzinski. After Luzinski stole second, Tommy Hutton was intentionally walked and Schmidt connected to make it 4-0.

The Phillies loaded the bases in the seventh on a single by Lonborg and consecutive bunt hits by Denny Doyle and Del Unser before Montanez singled to left to make it 6-0.

New York spoiled Lonborg's bid for a shutout in the eighth, when Wayne Garrett walked, moved up on a single by Ron Hodges and scored on a two out double by Don Hahn.

Lonborg, making his first start since May 19, picked up his fourth victory in 10 decisions.

Tennis stars plan boycott

LONDON (UPI) — The leaders of the world's top tennis stars voted early today to boycott the Wimbledon tennis tournament because of Nikki Pilic's suspension.

The boycott decision came in a three-hour meeting by a committee of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) headed by chief executive Jack Kramer and attended by several international tennis stars.

Pilic Wimbledon suspension stands

LONDON (UPI) — Yugoslavian tennis player Nikki Pilic failed Tuesday in a legal bid to lift the suspension that bars him from playing at Wimbledon.

High court judge Justice Forbes dismissed Pilic's application for injunctions against the International Lawn Tennis Federation (ILTF) and the All-England club.

Pilic was ordered to pay the costs of the three-day hearing in which he was backed by the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP).

The ATP has threatened its members will boycott Wimbledon unless Pilic is permitted to play. Pilic was suspended for one month by the ILTF for declining to play for the Yugoslav Davis Cup team.

Officials of the ATP said they would meet Tuesday night to consider what action to take after the day's judgment.

'Safety' key word as practice begins for Schaefer 500

LONG POND — With only three days of practice before the chase for the coveted pole position, 39 drivers begin their assault on Pocono International Raceway this morning in preparation for the third annual Schaefer 500.

The drivers, who will vie for 33 starting spots in the July 1 race, began arriving at the 2.5 mile tri-oval Monday. Car owners spent most of Tuesday registering the 43 cars entered with United States Auto Club officials.

All of the cars must undergo a rigid inspection by USAC before being allowed on the track when practice opens at 9 a.m. today. Practice will continue from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Friday.

After the carnage at Indianapolis last month, USAC approved a new set of safety rules which will go into effect with the running of the Schaefer 500.

Among the changes are:

—The maximum amount of fuel allowed on board during the race has been reduced from 75 to 40 gallons.

—All fuel on board be carried on the left side except for a "pickup tank" with a maximum capacity of 2.5 gallons. Placing of the fuel on the left side is expected to be a greater anti-fire measure.

—The area on the right side of the car formerly occupied by fuel will be filled with an energy-absorbing material.

—The wings will be "clipped" by reducing the maximum width from 64 inches to 55 inches to improve visibility and slow the cars somewhat in the turns.

—The total amount of fuel for the race will be reduced from 375 to 340 gallons.

—The new safety rules were adopted after two serious accidents at Indianapolis and have generally met with approval. The only point which had met with some criticism has been the reduction in the total amount of fuel.

Dr. Joseph Mattioli, Pocono's chief executive officer, notified his displeasure of the rule to Reynold MacDonald, USAC president.

Mattioli said the reduction in the allowable amount of fuel was "definitely insufficient." He noted that cars presently average 1.4 miles of fuel per gallon "which means that a car will have to pit once every 56 miles, necessitating approximately nine pit stops per race."

"We feel that this large number of pit stops will cause our pit road to become a series of drag races and this type of action along pit road with 33 fuel tanks and many crew members present is definitely more dangerous than the original situation that you were endeavoring to correct," Mattioli said.

He said the "simplest" solution would be to "reduce the total amount of fuel allowed per race so that the engines would have to be detuned to approximately two miles per gallon and thereby reduce the speeds proportionately."

Despite the increase in safety standards, drivers will still seek speed. The drivers will be out to better Bobby Unser's qualification record of 189.473 miles per hour set last year. The winner of this year's Rex Mays Classic at Milwaukee also had a single lap record of 190.210 mph.

Speed may be hard to find with the reduction of the wing size, but railbirds said Tuesday the cars may be equipped with a softer tire compound which would hold the racers better in the turns and make up for the loss of wing size.

Probably the biggest news to hit the track even before it opened was the announcement that Mark Donohue, the 1971 champion, will compete this year.

USAC had announced earlier that Donohue would not be allowed to compete after he exchanged his Automobile Competition Committee for the United States (ACCUS) license for a Canadian Autobile Sports Club card.

But the Federation Internationale de'Automobile approved a request which gives the Schaefer 500 an International (C) listing, thus permitting Donohue to become eligible as a graded foreign driver.

Donohue missed last year's race after he was injured preparing for a road race at Atlanta. Until last year the Newton Square resident held the track qualification mark of 172.393 mph. But during last year's time trials, 24 of the 33 in the field beat his old standard.

Time trials for this year's race begin Saturday with practice at 9 a.m. Following a track inspection, drivers will try for the pole position according to the order drawn at a meeting Friday night.

Saturday's fastest driver will win the pole position. Time trials will conclude from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

That will be the last time cars will be allowed on the track. Carbuertion tests will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. June 27. Pit practice—mainly for the crews—will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. and again from 3 to 5 p.m.

Shavers suddenly famous after knocking out Ellis

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The telephone hasn't stopped ringing since last night," Earnie Shavers said with a flourish pointing to the instrument in his hotel room.

Shavers blasted his way into the heavyweight division's big time Monday at Madison Square Garden when he knocked out former WBA champion Jimmy Ellis at 2 minutes 39 seconds of the first round in their 12-round main event.

Manager Don King, the talkative one of the duo from Warren, Ohio said: "I've received calls from all over the country. They've also come from Puerto Rico and London. Suddenly we're famous. It's fantastic. It's what we dreamed about."

King, however, said he had not signed for Shavers, unranked prior to his demolition of the fifth-ranked Ellis, to meet Jerry Quarry as announced by Garden matchmaker Teddy Brenner in the winner's dressing room Monday night.

"We have a good relationship with the Garden and Teddy Brenner but it is a bit premature to say we're fighting Quarry next. Sure we want to punish Quarry for pulling out of Monday's fight, but there are other considerations and offers we must listen to," King said.

Asked what exactly he had in mind, King said: "Mickey Duff called from London. We could earn well by fighting the winner of the Joe Frazier-Joe Bugner fight there July 2. Both Earnie and I are not opposed to going overseas and London is as fine a place as any.

"But the main thing is that we fight. We want to be like Joe Louis and Muhammad Ali. They met all legitimate contenders. We'll fight anyone en route to a shot at the title. Once we have it anyone with the correct credentials will not be ignored.

"George Foreman has not been a good champion. He has put the title on ice."

Shavers and King will challenge Foreman to a title match when they return to Ohio. "We'll do it from the Governor's mansion. He plans a party when we get back and the challenge will go out from there."

The Garden confirmed Shavers had not called to collect his $12,000 paycheck for the Ellis fight. King said: "Well that's peanuts, although we'll be collecting. But now we can talk in terms of real money. This does not mean we're going to hold promoters up to ransom, but we expect to get paid a realistic wage."

Shavers arrived at the Garden boasting 42 knockouts in his 44 victories. But knowledgeable fans pointed out he had not beaten a ranked fighter in the four years he had been fighting as a pro since switching codes after winning the '69 AAU title.

First Frazier, then Ali and now Ellis. Boxing's old guard have taken their lumps during 1973.

Dollar value spurs traders

Market begins to pick up

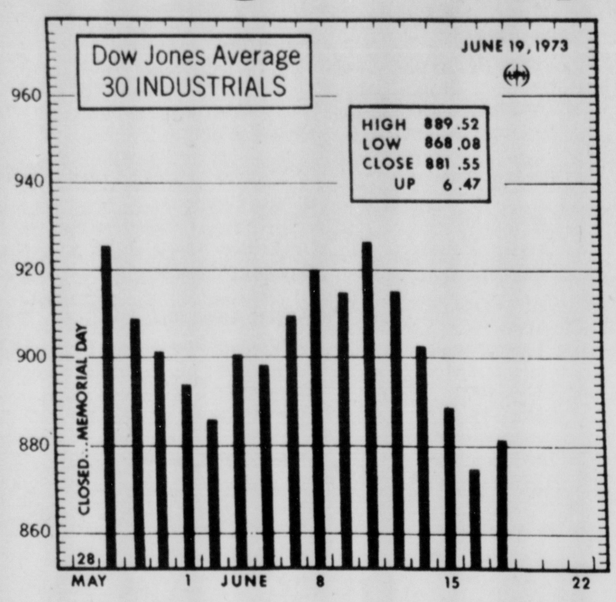
NEW YORK (UPI) — A last minute flurry of buying — mostly in blue chips —put the Dow Jones industrial average up more than 6 points to climax u session of irregular, sluggish trading on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday.

The Dow gained 6.47 to 881.55. The widely-followed indicator rose almost 7 points in the last half-hour of trading. Early in the session, the Dow had been up over 10 points, but spent most of the remainder of the day in the minus. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.39 to 103.99. The average price of a NYSE common share gained 11 cents.

Declines finished ahead of advances, 774 to 611, among 1,758 issues traded.

Turnover totaled 12,970,000 shares, compared with 11,460,000 shares Monday.

Analysts generally viewed the day's movement as backing and filling, with brief bargain-hunting sprees and technical spurts. They said the market was due to pause, if only briefly, after falling for four consecutive sessions.



Harry Laubscher of Walston & Co. said some of the market's strength Tuesday stemmed from a stronger dollar on European currency markets. He added the post-ponement until next week of John Dean's testimony before the Senate Watergate hearings came as a welcome relief to "a psychologically high-strung market."

Nonetheless, most observers agreed any buying that takes place in the next few weeks will be cautious, until Wall Street has a chance to evaluate the success of President Nixon's new anti-inflation measures. Investors have been concerned for several days over the ptssible adverse effects the 60-day freeze could have on corporate profits.

TWA led the actives, and lost ⅝ to 21½ on 232,500 shares. Chrysler was second, up ⅛ to 24¼, on 191,200 shares, followed by FMC Corp. which fell ¼ to 15⅜ on 156,000 shares.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange fell slightly in sluggish trading. The Amex index dropped 0.03 to 22.43. Volume came to 2,350,000 shares, compared with 2,050,000 shares traded on Monday.

Flowers lift Gotham's spirits

WOMAN'S VIEW
By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Man does not live by concrete alone. Plant one flower within his urbanized view and his spirit lifts. Plant thousands of flowers and you've lifted equal to thousands of spirits.

That's what is happening these days at New York's newest tourist attraction, a super-flower garden which opened this spring within the shadow of the United Nations.

Right across the street from the UN's towering marble and glass structure is a city-owned mall paralleling a regular street that runs between First and Second Avenues. The area is called Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, in honor of the UN's secretary-general killed in a plane crash in 1961 while on a peace mission in Northern Rhodesia.

Now the Plaza is becoming a mecca too. It's as natural as rain to drift across the street from the UN and enjoy the block-long mall abloom and agreen with about 150 varieties of flowers and shrubs. Most are potted for sale and constantly replenished from gardens as far away as California.

Plenty of company

I walk past the mall each day en route to office and home and always veer off my First Avenue beaten track to sit a spell.

You find yourself joined by hardhats eating heroes or having a Coke (New York is always building something), secretaries and executives alike stopping to rest the eyes, UN personnel, tourists with cameras, people who live in the neighborhood just coming to sit.

"We see people enter from Second Avenue frowning at the day's tensions of the city and by the time they get to First they're all smiling," said Mike Arrasate.

Arrasate is a partner with Lou Zeth in the Arrow Contracting firm in Brooklyn, the landscapers who put in the gardens in agreement with New York's Parks Recreation and Cultural Affairs Administration.

City saves money

Arrow was contacted bacause it had done a lot of work for another city park, the Brooklyn Botanical Garden, the spokesman said.

Arrasate's firm invested $35,000 for design, necessary construction and landscaping—saving the city a tidy sum. In turn, Arrow gets a percentage —never more than 20 per cent —of the gross sales of plants and shrubs.

Arrow also provides around-the-clock security which also would have added to the city bill. Now the city is considering similar government-private enterprise projects in other boroughs.

The mall always has been the site of demonstrations for or against something up for UN debate or calling for UN action on some issue.

Arrasate likes to recall the day he'd most feared—May 6, when some 100,000 persons demonstrated in the street calling on the UN to act on treatment of Jews in the Soviet.

"We lost only two geraniums," he said in awe. "That was flower power."

Gold rush peak

At the peak of the California gold rush there were 120,000 persons toiling for the metal.

Chemical content killing 'stuffy' hot dog business

By JOSEPH M. WINSKI
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

CHICAGO — The hot-dog business isn't so hot. In fact, it's going to the dogs.

That's because a lot of people are thinking the same way Beverly Mancinelli is. "We used to eat hot dogs all the time," the Lilburn, Ga., housewife says, "But I'm through stuffing my family with a bunch of chemicals."

In some places, says Herrel De Graff, president of the American Meat Institute, "the wiener is being clobbered." John Kraus, a New York City meat dealer, says his company's frankfurter sales fell more than 20 per cent last year from their 1971 level, forcing the company, John Kraus, Inc., into bankruptcy proceedings. "We never really recovered from Bess Myerson," Kraus says. Miss Myerson, former New York City consumer-affairs commissioner, used to tell New Yorkers she stopped eating franks when she "discovered what was in them."

Once enshrined as prime Americana, the hot dog began to tumble in February last year. An article in Consumer Reports Magazine charged, among other things, that the wiener has more fat and water, and a lot less protein than it did back in the 1930s.

Frankfurter sales last year rose only 1.35 per cent to 15 billion, worth $1.25 billion, in contrast to a 9.2 per cent gain in 1971. Short livestock supplies and high prices contributed to the slowdown, but adverse publicity also was "a significant factor," says D. C. Riley, executive vice president of Hygrade Food Products Corp. in Detroit.

Shrinking market

In a survey of consumers last November, Hygrade found that 47 per cent of them intended to buy fewer or no franks in the future.

"No question about it," Riley says. "The market is shrinking."

Some hot-dog producers are counterattacking. They're creating the biggest barrage of pro-dog publicity since the frankfurter from Frankfort and the weiner from Vienna were first slapped into long buns in America at the turn of the century.

"We're really fighting back," says Phyllis Lovrien, manager of consumer services at Oscar Mayer and Co., the biggest wiener maker, whose hot dog sales fell two per cent last year.

Oscar Mayer is devoting half its $8 million-to-$10 million network television advertising budget to hot dogs, which account for only five per cent of the company's yearly sales of $700 million.

The company has disseminated 200,000 "our hot dog stand" pamphlets and plans to blizzard the country with 2.5 million more. The company answers inquiries about hot dogs in detail and carefully monitors press and broadcasting coverage.

Consumer reports' key charge was that the protein content of the wiener had dropped to 11.7 per cent from 19.6 per cent since the 1930s. Emerson D. Moran, operations manager for Vienna Sausage Co.'s Los Angeles plant, researched the subject and says he has determined that the "reasonably honest product" cited in the article was actually "a dry sausage produced in 1897-98" that "had nothing to do with the frankfurter of any period."

Critics also have alleged that hot-dog additives, particularly nitrates, possibly can lead to the formation of cancer-promoting substances in the body. Some producers have tried abandoning additives. But the nonadditive frank looks a dirty grey-brown, says Leo Gabriel of San Francisco's John Allan and Sons Inc., "and it has a bitter taste that we just can't get rid of." It costs about 20 cents a pound more than a conventional wiener, he says, and it has a shorter shelf-life.

"It hasn't gone over well," Leonard Erkkila, meat buyer for a big California food cooperative, says of the nonadditive frank. Gian Food Inc., a supermarket chain based in Washington, D.C., says it has decided not to market a nonadditive dog "because the possibility of botulism is far too great."

The American Meat Institute, meanwhile, has spent more than $200,000 for an industry-government study that, according to the institute, shows nitrates are needed to prevent botulism and that hot dogs don't cause cancer.

Nixon puts best foot forward

By DONALD R. LARRABEE

WASHINGTON — In these days of enveloping bad news for the President, Nixon is putting on a show of confidence for those who are in and out of the Oval Office. He is described as being in good spirits and in a mood to charge forward with the unfinished business of his administration.

This portrait of a President in crisis comes from one of the few people who saw him at Camp David, Md. during the last week-end in April while the Watergate speech was being written. Raymond K. Price, Jr., special consultant and collaborator on important Nixon speeches, recalls it as an "intensely wrenching" experience — but says the worst is over.

"He's in good shape now. There are a lot of things he wants to get done, to get moving on. He's been through other tough things. He believes in what he is doing and he believes he will have no difficulty leading the country after its over," said Price, who has been putting Nixonian thoughts down on paper for six years, through two presidential campaigns and most of the real crises.

Some of the President's critics, and indeed, some of his past supporters, have been suggesting that he quit "for the good of the country." We asked Price, in an interview, if that could happen under any foreseeable circumstances.

"No," he replied emphatically. "He never could be driven to the point of quitting. It's not in his makeup."

Ray Price, the former chief editorial writer for the defunct New York Herald Tribune, is absolutely certain that Nixon did no wrong, approved no wrong nor that he would ever tolerate wrongdoing in his name.

To hear Price and some others who are very close to Nixon talk about it, the unfolding story of the Watergate and what was apparently perpetrated in behalf of the President's re-election comes as a daily surprise, bordering on the incredible.

"I don't think any of us — I know the President — didn't imagine it was this much of a thing. During the campaign last year, we kept reading these things in the paper. We tended to discount them, particularly with the Washington Post taking the lead . . . We assumed out of malice . . .

"The President was constantly being reassured it wasn't true. His private sources contradicted what was in the papers. We still don't know. I doubt that anybody knows, including the President. We really must wait for the judicial process to take its course to sort it all out.

"It's difficult for all of us here," he concluded, "A painful thing to watch. Most of us are appalled at each new revelation of what happened or what might have happened . . . as is the President. We are still suspending judgment."

The President is not glued to the television set to watch the Watergate proceedings but he is getting the benefit of a full run-on of press, radio and TV commentary good and bad, in the daily digest that is prepared for him.

Price picked up the 32-page digest for one day last week and thumbed through the pages. More than half of it — single-spaced — was devoted to the "story of the hour" including commentaries by network TV luminaries. Price claims the report isn't doctored, that it reflects what is "heavy" in the news, not just what someone thinks he should be reading. Clearly, it isn't pleasant White House reading.

"In personal terms," said Price, "This has got to be as tough as anything the President has faced . . . because people he values are involved. It's always tougher when it involves friends than when it involves just yourself."

The Presidential speech writer takes no credit whatsoever for the Camp David speech on Watergate. It was, he says, "a very personal thing . . . I don't know any speech that has been more from the heart than this one."

Gathered close to the President on this week-end of crisis, one-on-one, at various times, were just a few of those who have been friends, confidantes and counselors over the years. Secretary of State Bill Rogers was one of them. Another was Price and another was Rose Mary Woods, the personal secretary who knows more than anyone about the earlier agonies of this President.

This, his friends say, was Nixon's darkest hour. "The worst of it has passed, in terms of getting him down," said Price, a man who should know. While the country is devouring a daily diet of political scandal, Richard Nixon is pictured as a man free of self-doubts who is looking beyond Watergate and its lessons for the Presidency — and the country.

Safety rules set for parks

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Park Service has issued a leaflet containing the twelve commandments of safety for park visitors this year.

The leaflet, "Danger in the National Park System," will strengthen the park safety program which the park service says reduced deaths and injuries in parks in 1972 to the lowest level since 1964.

The 12 rules are:

Protect your park and yourself.

Don't swim alone.

Register your boat.

Heed fishing regulations.

Be cautious of thermal pools.

Drive carefully.

Dress properly.

Watch your children.

Respect wildlife.

Don't travel alone.

Keep rangers informed when hiking or climbing.

The park service elaborates on these rules, reminding visitors to be especially careful of bears.

Also, visitors should take note of all water conditions before plunging in and keep within rescue distance while swimming.

Rte. 81-E sign work started

HARRISBURG — State Transportation Secretary Jacob Kassab has announced that work crews have begun the change of Interstate Rte. 81-E to Interstate Rte. 380.

Signs along the 20-mile superhighway and its access roads are being changed to the new designation. The change was made to avoid possible confusion with other highways in the area with similar numbers: I-80, I-81 and I-84.

The newly numbered I-380 presently runs from I-80 near Pocono Manor to Rte. 307 near Moscow, Lackawanna County. When completed in 1976, the highway will connect with I-84 just east of Scranton.

From: The Pocono Record
Re: Automobile Advertising

This memo is addressed specifically to you as an automobile dealer. We put it in this newspaper — where just about everybody will see it — because we are virtually certain that you will be among those reading it and concentrating on the message.

If you've read this far, you know we're right, and that's part of what we want to say.

This newspaper reaches 80 per cent of all the households in our coverage area. Research by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. shows that 82 per cent of all readers open and look at the ad pages, and that those most interested in buying a car will be most likely to read the ads about cars.

The newspaper has another advantage for you. You "freeze" your message so the reader can take his time absorbing the facts. There is no 10-20-30 second limit on what you can say. Show your full line, make comparisons, really tell the story. It's okay — the message isn't going to fade in a few seconds.

A final word about the newspaper reader. He's upscale. 77 per cent of all adults 18 and over will read a newspaper today, but readership will be 84 per cent among those making $10,000 a year or more, and they're the ones who can afford the big ticket items you sell.

Detroit makes good use of mass, non-selective media for umbrella promotions of your line. But it's up to you to close the sale. And Detroit relies on you to make good use of the local ad medium that has always been the backbone of retail selling.

That's the newspaper. That's us. Let us help you get more out of every advertising dollar, reaching the real prospects when they are really shopping for a car.
